Quincy residents will have a chance to vote early in this fall's municipal election in-person at City Hall.

City councillors on Monday unanimously approved designating City Hall, located at 1305

Hancock St., as the early voting location for both the Sept. 14 preliminary election and the final election on Nov. 2.

City Hall will be open for early voting from Tuesday, Sept. 7, through Friday, Sept. 10 ahead of the preliminary and from Monday, Oct. 25 through Friday, Oct. 29, ahead of the final election. Early voting will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on those dates.

Census: City's Population Tops 101,000

Data Also Shows Quincy More Diverse

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's population has surpassed 101,000 residents, an increase of more than 10 percent over the past decade, according to recently released federal census

The data also show that Quincy has become more diverse since the last decennial census.

The US Census Bureau on Aug. 12 released results of the 2020 survey that show Quincy's population had grown to 101,636 residents That number is up from 92,271 residents in 2010, an increase of 9,365 people or 10.15 percent.

Mayor Thomas Koch said he expects Quincy's actual population is higher than what the latest census indicates.

"The number that came in, I think, was a little low," he said in an Aug. 12 phone interview. "We

Turtle Protection, Ecological Restoration At Butler's Pond

The City of Quincy's Department of Natural Resources (QDNR) is teaming up with the New England Herpetological Society (NEHS), the New England Wildlife Center (NEWC), and the Friends of Butler's Pond (FOBP) to protect the turtles of Butler's Pond prior to the start of a largescale ecological restoration project there.

The mayor's office announced the effort in a press release last week.

In April, Quincy City Council unanimously approved $1.4 million in funding for the dredging of 3,900 cubic yards of sediment from Butler's Pond and the construction of a gravel stormwater treatment wetland at the north end of the pond following completion of the dredging. This to NEWC, where they will work will restore the pond's natural depth, which will strengthen its function as a stormwater retention basin, as well as improve water and habitat quality via the removal of decades worth of accumulated sediment. The hydraulic dredging method to be used will pose minimal risk to the pond's wildlife. However, as news of the planned restoration work spread, many folks from Quincy and beyond began expressing concern for some of the pond's most beloved inhabitants - the

Route 3 Billboard Withdrawn By Applicant

By SCOTT JACKSON

The developer seeking permission to install a digital billboard along Route 3 in Quincy – a proposal that drew opposition from Quincy and Braintree residents and elected officials - has withdrawn his request to do

The John Flatley Company had been seeking approval from the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals, to construct the new digital billboard at 1 Crown Drive, which is located within the Elevation apartment complex at Crown Colony. The board held a public hearing on the proposal on July 13 and was scheduled to take up the matter again on Aug.

withdrawn without prejudice. The ZBA approved the request to withdraw the application in a unanimous vote.

The proposed 35-foottall digital billboard would have faced toward Route 3 and Braintree and would replace an existing billboard already on site.

During last month's public hearing, Douglas Richardson, a vice president with the John Flatley Company, said the height of the billboard, 35 feet, was chosen because it is 18 feet lower than the nearby buildings that comprise the Elevation apartment complex. Richardson presented the ZBA a slideshow he said indicated the billboard would have no visual impacts when viewed from the Common Street neighborhood and other areas in Braintree.

Drivers headed northbound on Route 3, Richardson added, would have a "very limited view" of the sign. He said the billboard would be placed at an angle and its pixels would use shades - which he likened to blinders used on horses to limit the amount of bleed from the side of the signs.

Residents and elected officials from Braintree, however, said the digital billboard would negatively impact the quality of life in their community.

Braintree Town Councillor Julia Flaherty, whose district includes Common elevation than Common Street and in the second floors of homes, particularly in winter when there are no leaves on trees.

"It will impact our property values. It will impact our quality of life. No digital billboard belongs that close to a residential neighborhood," she said at the July public hearing. "I really hope that Braintree neighborhoods are not irrelevant to your consideration."

Braintree Town Councillor Steven Sciascia, whose district abuts Flaherty's, noted that a digital billboard next to Route 3 in Weymouth generated complaints from area residents concerned about light pollution after it was installed.

"The issue is not the billboard, it is the fact that it is a digital, 24-hour-a-day lighted billboard that will be seen from a lot of areas in Braintree," Sciascia said last month. "Those lights radiate. Everyone has seen them. You have heard all the controversy from towns like Weymouth that have signs like this go in and the impact it has on neighbors."

While the developer had been seeking permission to build the new billboard, a provision in Quincy's municipal code prohibits the construction of new billboards and also prevents the ZBA from granting a variance for such a sign.

"The construction of new off-premises signs, in-Prior to the Aug. 10 hear- Street and other nearby ar- cluding billboards, is proing, however, the applicant eas, said the sign would be hibited throughout the City asked that the request be visible in areas at a higher and the City may not issue permits for their construction or relocation. No use variance shall be granted to vary this provision," the municipal code states.

At the July public hearing, Edward Fleming, the applicant's attorney, said a separate section of the code gives the ZBA the ability to grant use variances in all zoning districts throughout the city - a provision he said was not changed when the City Council barred the ZBA from granting variances for billboards. In addition, Fleming said the ability to permit billboards ultimately rests with the state's Outdoor Advertising Board.

Bellotti Withdraws From Councillor At-Large Race

Now Four-Way Contest For Three Seats

By SCOTT JACKSON

Michael Bellotti is no longer seeking a spot on the City Council this fall, leaving four candidates in the running for three at-large Bellotti had qualified for the ballot in the November election but on Aug. 12 announced he would be withdrawing from the race. In a statement to The Sun, Bellotti said he was forgoing a bid for an at-large seat to focus on his role as the treasurer of Norfolk County.

"During the past several days, I've received an outpouring of encouragement to run for an at-large seat on the Quincy City Council. I have always appreciated the confidence and backing that my fellow Quincy neighbors have given to me in my elections as State Representative, Norfolk Sheriff and County Treasurer. It would indeed be an incredible opportunity to serve on the city council and work with a mayor of Tom Koch's caliber," Bellotti said.

"In politics, however, timing is everything. And right now, my time has to be focused on my current role as County Treasurer. In the next two years, my office

"I want to thank everyone who encouraged me to run. Your words of advice and support were deeply appreciated not just by me, but also my family."

Bellotti, a Squantum resident, served six years as a state representative and then 20 years as county sheriff. He left his position as sheriff in 2018 to become interim president of Quincy College. Bellotti led the municipally owned school for a year and was elected county treasurer last November.

Gasoline Prices Up One Cent

Massachusetts's average gas price is up 1 cent from last week ($3.04), averaging $3.05 per gallon. Monday's price is 3 cents higher than a month ago ($3.02), and 93 cents higher than Aug. 16, 2020 ($2.12). Massachusetts's average gas price is 13 cents lower than the national average.

"Although a drop in demand has helped to minimize pump price increases and stabilize the national average, elevated crude prices continue to keep pump prices high as the end of summer draws near," said Mary Maguire, AAA Northeast Director of Public and Government Affairs.

AAA Northeast's August 16 survey of fuel prices found the current national average to 1 cent lower than last week ($3.19), averaging $3.18 a gallon. Monday's national average price is 2 cents higher than a month ago ($3.16), and $1.01 higher than this day last year ($2.17).

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with the situation today. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you - refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still so low, lower than fixed-rate equity loans, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-376-3500. Colonial Federal, a bank with ideas.

BBB: 6 Scams for College Students to Avoid

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

During this time of the year, college students are having to spend money on tuition payments and school supplies as they begin a new semester. However, scammers are taking this opportunity to try to steal some of that money through various schemes and scams.

According to BBB's most recent Scam Tracker Risk Report, adults ages 18-24 reported the highest median losses ($150) and many of the scams took place online.

With many colleges considering their COVID-19 policies for school years, scammers will still take advantage of the situation using tactics that have worked in the past. One tactic that has been used to get students' personal information is a phishing email that claims to be from the school's "Financial Department." The email claims to have information about an economic stimulus check or may ask for personal identification to verify that the student has received a COVID-19 vaccination. Or, if the student hasn't received one yet, may offer locations on where to get one. Messages via text or email may appear to instructing to click on a link provided in the email and log in with a student username and password. Don't do it; by doing so, it could provide the user name, password, or other personal information to scammers, while possibly downloading malware onto the

Whether you are a student starting school away from home or have young students who may be vulnerable to such scams, BBB recommends watching out for these financial scams before heading into the new semester.

• Fake credit cards - Offers to apply for the first credit card are tempting to many students. Not only could this create credit problems down the road due to unchecked spending, some of the deals could be phony offers designed to get access to personal information. Research the offers from the credit card, flyers as well as the banking institutions before applying. Review the BBB Tip on Credit Card Scams.

· Too Good to be true apartments - It's hard to not jump on a convenient apartment so close to campus, especially if it advertises affordable rent. It's tempting to hand over credit card information online to lock in a great spot, but it's always worth seeing the apartment in person prior to a money transfer. This also applies to Craigslist ads of other students looking for roommates.

• Safe credit reports - It's a good idea to start practicing some healthy money habits as early as the age of 18. One such habit is regularly checking your credit report for unusual activity and possible ID fraud. The official government website to do this for free is annualcreditreport.com.

 Scholarship and grant scams - Be wary of phone calls from companies guaranteeing they can help reduce loan payments or offer a hefty grant. Searching the company's name online could bring up scam alerts or negative reviews from other consumers. Read reviews and complaints about the company at BBB.org and contact the school's financial aid office for advice and help regarding financing your education. Scholarship scams can affect college students even after graduation; read our tips on scholarship scams.

• Online shopping scams - Online purchase scams were the #1 culprit for scams in 2020 attacking 18-25 year olds especially through social media platforms and apps. BBB has tips for smart shopping online.

 Awareness of current scams - As tech savvy as current college students can be, a surprising number of scams reported to BBB's ScamTracker are from students who learned their lesson too late. Use BBB's ScamTracker to learn of the latest scam trends and read local reports of spe-

Route 3 Billboard Proposal Withdrawn By Applicant

Anne Mahoney, however, said the intent of city councillors was clear when they barred the ZBA from granting variances for new billboards.

"The city of Quincy made it very clear that we do not want billboards anymore in the city," she said at the July meeting. "Billboards do not have an economic value for the residents of the city of Quincy. It doesn't make the area more valuable - it actually depresses the area, and that is a fact if you do the Members of the zoning board also expressed skepticism over the proposed billboard at the July public hearing.

Michael Covais, the board's vice chairperson, said he was concerned about the proposed location of the sign along Route 3, calling it a "terrible place for it."

"Though it is not part of my job, I know, I am concerned about our neighbors too. We should be good neighbors," Covais added. "The citizens of Quincy aren't going to get anything out of it and the citizens of Braintree may have some problems."

Martin Aikens, board's chairperson, likewise questioned what value the new billboard would provide to Quincy. Aikens said he did not want to vote on the matter at the July 13 meeting because the board received more than 40 letters about the proposal and wanted time to consider that input prior to casting a vote.

In addition, ZBA member Brian Radell said he wanted to hear from the city solicitor or another city official about whether the board could even grant a variance for the billboard before a vote on the matter.

Scenes From Yesterday

QUINCY BAY, WOLLASTON, QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS

THIS 1942 postcard shows the moored floats stretching out from the Wollaston Yacht Club into Quincy Bay. All of the boats of that era were made of wood and many were homemade, especially the skiffs and small rowboats, but also many of the sailboats. There is one powerboat shown on the left here but there were not many outboard motor boats at the time. Gas rationing during World War II had pretty much curtailed its use for pleasure in anyway. In the days before marinas there were hundreds of small boats in Quincy Bay. Every night in the summer sailboat races were held by the yacht clubs. Dozens of sails can be seen in the distance here. Some of the popular classes of sailboats were the Hustlers, Indians, 110s and 210s, Catboats, Thistles and Turnabouts.

Attention Families Of WWII, Korean War Veterans

We all know we are experiencing difficult times and many veterans organizations are declining and membership continues to fall by the wayside. Most of our older members have let their memberships expire and some just never wanted to join for reasons unknown.

These days the World War II and Korean War heroes are not getting a final farewell ceremony and support from local posts here in the city of Quincy that they deserve. So, the Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294 of the American Legion and the Quincy Veterans Council would like to honor these men and women who served our nation with honor and pride and to say goodbye. Both organizations will combine to do their best to honor these veterans either at their wake or burial with a small honor guard to pay our respects. While the family will receive a military honor guard from the government for their loved one, rest assured that we will do our best to stand beside your family and friends and salute your loved one with honor and thankfulness for serving our nation and defending our freedom as we know it today. We feel nobody should go alone especially a veteran who gave us the freedom we have today.

So, if this sad day occurs, please contact George Bouchard at the Quincy Veterans Services for more info at 617-376-1194.

May God Bless all of our veterans young and old for your sacrifice.

Valuing Education In Our Great City

As we begin the process of getting our students back to school for what looks to be another challenging year, I am disheartened and frustrated by the message our city is sending to our dedicated, creative, and hardworking force of teachers.

In a June 30th article in the Quincy Sun regarding the 0% raise for 2020 and a 3% raise for 2021 offered to police and fire unions Mayor Koch is quoted "I'm grateful for the work our men and women sworn to protect us performed during this extraordinary year, their ongoing partnership, and their firm understanding that we're all in this together as a community."

Yet to our teachers, who have worked tirelessly, reinvented their entire way of teaching, pivoted continuously with

The safety of our city is certainly valuable and deserving of proper compensation. So too is our excellent team of teachers who provide knowledge, safety, and care directly to the close to 10,000 youngest in our community. Our city's students and their families deserve teachers who are equally valued and fairly compensated for their hard work and dedication to our community. We certainly are "all in this together." The Post Office Department plans to construct a new post office.

The department has taken an option on a tract of vacant land on Hancock Street as a possible site for the new facility.

The land is located at 454-460 Hancock Street near the intersection of Hayward Street, it was revealed in a letter Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa received from John N. Murphy of the regional real estate office of the Post Office.

If the site is approved, a modern masonry building will be constructed. It would be privately owned and leased to the government.

RESIDENTS TO FIGHT BURGER KING LICENSE

The question of the reconsideration of the Burger King Restaurant on the old Brooks-Skinner property granted last week will be on the upcoming agenda of the Quincy License Commission.

The Commission had received an application from attorney Nicholas Barbadoro representing about 200 citizens living in the area, for reconsideration. Ward 4 Councillor George B. McDonald also appeared before the Commission in the interest of reconsideration.

BILL ASKS INCINERATOR SITE IN BLUE HILLS

Senator James S. McCormack (D-Quincy) filed a legislative bill in the legislature for the city of Quincy to acquire, from the M.D.C., 12 acres of land in the Blue Hills Reservation, to serve as a site for an incinerator.

F Sen. McCormack announced he had cleared the way for the late filed bill.

The bill will direct the M.D.C. to transfer the plot to the city, but it is optional with the mayor and city council whether or not the land is acquired.

The bill will be written so that Quincy will have to pay only a nominal price for the land.

rights matters and actively represents people of color and immigrant women to protect their rights in the workplace and community.

Before joining Lawyers for Civil Rights, Hall was a staff attorney at the AIDS Action Committee where she took on legal cases that created positive health impacts for clients living with HIV/AIDS.

Hall earned a bachelor's degree from Emory University and a juris doctorate degree from Boston College Law School.

"One of our organization's greatest assets is our highly engaged board, and the board is further strengthened by new members who bring strong leadership qualities, diverse personal perspectives and professional experience, and active engagement in their communities," said David B. Waters, CEO of Community Servings. "Our new directors and their shared passion for our 'food is medicine' mission will help guide Community Servings as we continue to grow and serve more people with critical and chronic illnesses."

Movie Review: 'The Suicide Squad'

By BOB GARVER

"The Suicide Squad" has probably the most important "The" in movie title history, so important that it should be alphabetized under "T" instead of "S." This is a film that desperately wants to differentiate itself from 2016's "Suicide Squad," a film with tremendous potential that managed to blow one opportunity after another. The film is based on characters from DC Comics, and promises to "get them right this time," a promise that has worked to varying degrees in the past. For every "Deadpool," there's a "Fant4stic," but the addition of controversial director James Gunn and a turnup of R-rated content has gotten fans excited for an edgier film. And yes, this is the better of the two "Suicide Squad" movies, but it's mostly by default.

Only four characters from the first movie return here: franchise standout Harley Quinn (Margot Robbie), team organizer Amanda Waller (Viola Davis), team babysitter Rick Flag (Joel Kinneman), and barely-tolerated team member Boomerang (Jai Courtney). Waller puts together teams of criminals to do black ops missions with no expectations of survival. In this movie it's actually two teams, but one fares very poorly. Some of the actors on that team seem to have been cast just so the audience can cheer for their faces getting blown off. It's the second team that gets most of the focus after the opening scene.

New characters include weapons expert Bloodsport (Idris Elba), other weapons expert Peacemaker (John Cena), rodent-controller Ratcatcher 2 (Daniela Melchior), self-explanatory Polka-Dot Man (David Dastmalchian), and loveable maneater King Shark (Sylvester Stallone). I liked most of these characters, especially Bloodsport thanks to Elba, but I didn't go so much for King Shark. With his monosyllabic vocabulary and Gunn's direction, it felt too much like the movie was trying to turn him into the DCEU's version of Groot. I would much rather the film have imported the charming Ron Funches from the "Harley Quinn" TV series to voice the char-

Waller sends the teams in to a South American island that houses a Nazi-era laboratory that holds an extraterrestrial presence. The country has recently undergone a revolution, with a revolution to that revolution coming soon. I could have gone without either revolution storyline, even though they're the backdrop for the only interesting Harley scenes in the movie. The team eventually locates The Thinker (Peter Capaldi), who introduces them to Starro the Conquerer, a giant starfish who serves as the Big Bad of the film.

The film jumps around in time a lot, a device I usually despise, but it's handled well here. Much of the action is taking place concurrently, so it makes sense that we'd have to see one set of scenes, then the other. Again, the stuff with Harley and the new government is the most awkward fit of the bunch, but the movie had to give us some Harley-centric scenes at some point, and they're good scenes in and of themselves, just not a great fit with the search for the laboratory.

"The Suicide Squad" falls into a few traps of the genre, with a few too many characters and subplots, but it makes up for its shortcomings by being funny and exciting. It was definitely the right decision to go for the R rating here, and it makes the original seem even more toothless when you get a taste of what could have been. Sometimes you want to see bad guys just get bloodlessly swallowed up like in "Black Widow" and sometimes you want to see them get absolutely ripped apart like they do here. This movie doesn't hit the target as well as it wants, but it doesn't waste its shot like the first movie.

Grade: B-

"The Suicide Squad" is rated R for strong violence and gore, language throughout, some sexual references, drug use and brief graphic nudity. Its running time is 132 minutes.

Jim's Zucchini Pasta

By MARIE

My son, Jim, who lives on Long Island, often cooks for all of us using the latest new recipe he has found when he comes home for a visit. This past Mother's Day he made a delicious pasta dish which was very simple to make and with satisfying results.

Ingredients and Directions

- 1 medium zucchini, sliced ¼ inch 2 cloves of garlic, chopped
- 3 tablespoons of olive oil
- ½ pound Bucatini (or spaghetti) ½ cup parmesan cheese, grated
- 3 tablespoons butter
- Pinch of salt

Peanut Butter Cookies

er gently.

By SUZIE

These cookies have no flour, or eggs and can be made in a jiffy. (Just don't use Jiffy peanut butter. Too much sugar.)

We all have over ripe bananas and don't know what to do with them. They are great cut into pieces and frozen in baggies for smoothies, or for baking as well. I would bet everyone has all of these ingredients in their homes most of the time, minus the chocolate chips. Delicious and good for you as well.

If you are allergic to nuts, you can substitute a product called Sunbutter which is made from sunflower seeds rather than peanuts and makes a great substitute. Just make sure you get the kind with no sugar or the cookies will be too sweet. Enjoy!

1 very ripe banana, mashed

1 teaspoon baking soda

1 teaspoon vanilla

1/2 cup organic chocolate chips Directions

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Mix everything except the chocolate chips in a food processor (or by hand just mix well) until well combined. Stir in chocolate chips.

2. Using moistened hands, form generous 1 tablespoon (use more if you want bigger cookies) dough for each cookie into ball. Arrange on 2 ungreased baking sheets, spacing 2 inches apart.

3. Bake cookies until puffed, golden on bottom and still soft to touch in center, about 12 minutes. Cool on sheets 5 minutes. 1 cup organic peanut butter (made Transfer to racks; cool completely.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty: My Social Security Income Hurts When I File My Taxes

By RUSSELL GLOOR
National Social Security Advisor
At the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm
Of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I am getting hammered with taxes on my Social Security (SS). I am retired and draw a meager work pension and SS benefits. When my wife and I filed our joint tax return we owed the IRS a substantial amount of money - they took 85% of my SS in taxes. We are just barely over the minimal amount of income allowed for SS tax exemption. Is there anything I can do so I do not have to pay all this money at once at the end of the year? I didn't get any tax advice when I started drawing my SS and the guy who prepared our tax return couldn't have cared less. No one ever told me that I would get double-taxed on the SS that I worked so hard for. Any help or advice is appreciated, I cannot take another hit like this again. Signed: Double-Taxed

Dear Double-Taxed: Unfortunately, taxation of Social Security benefits has been law since 1983 when the law to allow 50% of benefits to be taxed was enacted. In 1993 they added another threshold to allow up to 85% of SS benefits to be taxable. Just to clarify the way it works (not that it will soften the pain), they don't take 85% of your SS benefits away in taxes – but 85% of your SS benefits becomes part of your overall taxable income at whatever your normal IRS tax rate is for your income level. So, if your IRS tax rate is 10%, that percentage is applied to 85% of your SS benefits received during the tax year (at your income level).

As for whether there is anything you can do, short of lowering your overall income the answer is no. The IRS determines taxability of your SS benefits based upon something called your "Modified Adjusted Gross Income" or "MAGI" which is your normal Adjusted Gross Income (AGI) from your tax return, plus 50% of the Social Security benefits you received during the tax year, with any non-taxable interest you may have had added back in. With an IRS filing status of "married-filing jointly," if your MAGI was more than $32,000 then 50% of your SS benefits are included in your taxable income; if your MAGI is more than $44,000 then up to 85% of your SS benefits becomes part of your overall taxable income. And unfortunately, there's no way around that. FYI, the thresholds for single filers are $25,000 (above which 50% of SS is taxable) and $34,000 (above which 85% of SS is taxable). Below those minimum thresholds for both single and married filers, Social Security benefits aren't taxable.

To soften the income tax burden when you file your taxes each year, you may want to consider having taxes withheld from your SS benefit payments. That's easy to do by submitting IRS form W-4V to your local Social Security office. Here's a link at which you can download and print that form: www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/fw4v. pdf. You will see that you can choose to have any of the following percentages of your SS benefit withheld for Federal Income Tax purposes – 7%, 10%, 12% or 22%. To find the mailing address for your local Social Security office, go to www.ssa.gov/locator.

On Monday, July 26, at approximately 11:55 a.m., Officer Habib was dispatched to Jackson Street regarding a larceny of a moped. Upon arrival, she spoke with the victim who stated he last saw the moped around 3 a.m. His son had woken him up around 7 a.m. to tell him it was no longer there.

There was no suspect information or video surveillance at that time. The victim provided proper documentation to show that the moped was purchased for $600 and stated there was no damage to the red moped prior to the theft.

Later that day, at approximately 2:25 p.m., Officer Milliken called for back-up at Darrow Street and Rock Island Road. Officer Milliken witnessed a white moped being operated by a light skinned black male with short cornrows, not wearing a helmet. Directly behind him was a red moped, operated by a black male, black shirt, black shorts with a black face mask covering his mouth and nose. On the back of the red moped was a white male, wearing grey shorts and a red hat.

Officer Milliken was in full detail uniform at the time, working in a construction detail. He was aware of the prior stolen moped mentioned above. Officer Milliken stepped into the roadway next to his active construction detail with both hands in the air and yelled "Police, Stop!" to inquire about the motor vehicle violation he was witnessing, to see if the operators were actively licensed, and to inquire about his suspicions that the red moped may be stolen. As he stood in the street, the operator of the white moped ignored his commands and sped towards him, coming within close proximity to striking him.

Officer Milliken stepped to the right of the vehicle and again yelled "Police, Stop!" to the operator of the red moped. This operator came within mere inches of him before dumping the moped to the ground, causing significant damage to the front end. The passenger of the red moped fled on foot southbound towards Sea Street. Officer Milliken was able to grab the operator of the red moped briefly before being shoved and losing grip. Both parties eventually fled to the corner of Rock Island Road and Darrow Street where they met the operator of the white moped and fled down Rock Island Road towards Sea Street. Officer Milliken radioed to communications for back up and multiple units responded, setting up a perimeter in the area.

After a brief search, the white moped was found, as well as the passenger of the red moped. Officer Milliken positively identified him as the passenger of the red moped who had fled from him. Both mopeds were seized and towed by Schlagers.

The passenger, a 15-year-old male from Quincy, was arrested and charged with receiving stolen property and wanton destruction of property. Two suspects (operators) remained at large at that time.

The following day, Officer Burgio conducted a follow-up investigation and was able to identify a possible suspect as the operator of the white moped. Officer Milliken was able to view pictures of the suspect and positively identified him. The juvenile does not possess a license or permit to operate a motor vehicle in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. While operating a moped with no helmet, he ignored Officer Milliken's lawful commands to "stop" and instead decided to accelerate towards Officer Milliken, almost striking him. The operator then fled the scene erratically in the middle of an active construction zone with heavy machinery and open man-hole and sewer covers.

For these reasons, the 15-year-old from Quincy will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for assault with a dangerous weapon (moped), failure to stop for police, unlicensed operator of a motor vehicle, and moped violation (no helmet).

A 16-year-old from Quincy has been identified as a person of interest in this investigation. It is believed that he was the operator of the red moped, however, no charges have been filed at this time and this investigation remains open.

Another Job Well Done

On Aug. 7, at approximately 1 a.m., Officer Ronald McKim was dispatched to a residence on Fayette Street for a Breaking and Entering that had just occurred. While enroute, dispatch informed him that the suspect had popped open a locked screen door and entered his kitchen. The description given was a white male with a white tank top and a black backpack. Officer McKim immediately realized that this description matched the description of a person who called 911 at 11:25 p.m. and was making erratic statements. The individual was identified, evaluated by EMS, and sent on his way.

Officer McKim spoke to the victim. The victim stated that he was in the basement when he heard a loud pop. Thinking that something in the kitchen had fallen to the floor, he went upstairs to investigate. As he entered the kitchen, he encountered a man that was in his kitchen, just inside the door that leads outside to the driveway. He described the man as a white male, in his 30's, who was bald, and was wearing a white tank top shirt and dark pants. He stated that the man was rummaging through a black backpack when he first saw him in the kitchen.

The victim stated that he was alarmed by the man and asked him what he was doing in his house. The man then fled down Fayette Street towards Brook Street. The victim reported that nothing was missing. Officer McKim provided an updated description of the suspect to other patrol units and began to assist in the search.

While searching on Brook Street, Officer McKim was flagged down by a man who stated that earlier in the evening a white male was acting erratically on the second floor of an address on Newport Avenue. He described the male as being bald and wearing a black back pack. The bystander stated that the male was on the second floor for about 4 hours, from 7-11 p.m. The bystander stated that when he first observed the man he was holding a fire extinguisher and appeared to be trying to use it to open a locked door. He confronted the suspect and was able to get the man to leave. He stated he last saw the man entering the Wollaston MBTA Station.

While taking the bystander's statement, Officer McKim was informed that a possible suspect was located in the parking lot of CVS on Beale Street. Officer McKim proceeded to that location where Officers Harrington and Le had the suspect detained. The suspect was a bald white male wearing a white tank top shirt and black shorts. He had a black backpack, as well as a black duffel bag. Officer McKim read the suspect his Miranda Rights and asked him if he had entered a house on Fayette Street. The suspect stated that he did not.

Officer McKim then returned to Fayette Street and asked the victim if he was willing to do a "Show Up" Identification. Officer McKim read the victim the instructions for a Show Up ID attempt. He then transported the victim to the CVS parking lot. Immediately upon arrival, the victim positively identified the suspect.

The suspect, a 39-year-old homeless man from Boston, was arrested and transported to the Quincy Police Station where he was booked by Sgt. Coughlin: He was charged with Unarmed Burglary. Great work!

Back-To-School Family Movie Night Aug. 26

Sheriff Patrick McDermott announces the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office will host a free back-to-school movie night for families on Aug. 26th at the department's Braintree location. The NCSO will be screening the 1993 family movie "The Sandlot."

"As the summer wraps up and families begin preparing for the return of the school year, we wanted to find a fun way to get together," McDermott said. "Movie night is a great way for families to do just that by enjoying a fun film and relaxing."

Set in the early 1960s, "The Sandlot" follows the adventures of a group of young boys who form a backyard baseball team.

The Sheriff's Office will also be partnering with the United Way to host a food drive that evening to benefit the Marge Crispin Center of Braintree and is encouraging attendees to bring a non-perishable food item to donate.

The film will be screened outdoors at the Sheriff's Office in Braintree at 2015

Washington St., and the program will begin at 6:30 p.m. Popcorn and light refreshments will be provided free of charge, and there will be giveaways and a free raffle.

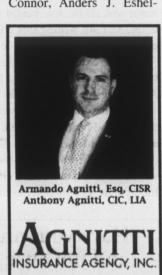

Families or individuals wishing to attend should bring a blanket or lawn chair free at tinyurl.com/NCSO-

O'Donnell Reports Continued Increases In Norfolk Real Estate Activity

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports that the increases seen in real estate activity in Norfolk County is continuing. The month of July in 2021 from a real estate perspective remained hot as there were increases in a number of real estate indicators over the same time period in

"The Norfolk County real estate market continues to be steady. There were 16,623 documents recorded at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds which is a 1% increase over last year's July document volume," O'Donnell said. "There were 2,061 deeds recorded out of this document volume, representing a 16% increase over July of last year. Average sale price, again including both residential and commercial sales, increased 21% over 2020 to $1,013,839.90.

Even though there was the monies for mortgages the number of mortgages recorded decreased over the previous year's numbers. There were 3,443 mortgages recorded during the month which is an 17% decrease over 2020. Total amount of money borrowed for mortgages county wide was well over 2 billon, a 61% increase compared to July 2020.

"While some of the mortgages are due to purchases and sales of real estate, there a considerable increase to are a large number of individuals and families taking advantage off historically low interest rates by refinancing existing mortgages. Individuals have different motivations to refinance. Some refinance to reduce their monthly payments, others to take some years off their debt while still others are using the money to pay for home improvements and other capital expenditures" O'Donnell said.

"There has been a strong demand for housing, single family housing particular, coupled with a limited supply of available housing stock and historically low interest rates which could be motivating buyers to do what is necessary to secure housing. The growth in numbers seen in 2020 continues into 2021," O'Donnell added.

A moratorium on foreclosures in place during the pandemic in 2020 was lifted on Oct. 17, 2020. This moratorium was in place due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has been closely watching the foreclosure market.

"During July of 2021 there were 5 foreclosure deeds recorded as a result of foreclosure processes taking place in Norfolk County. Additionally, there were 5 Notices to Foreclosure Mortgages, the first step in the foreclosure process, recorded here in Nor-

guest house. Is that possible? Brandon

Sure, why not? Even if you don't have a flat roof like the iconic houses built from 1945 to 1969, you can certainly mimic this architectural style which is trending again today.

As a grade school kid, I fell in love, love, LOVE with mid-century modern because my friend Jeri's family lived in a beautiful home like this overlooking Whitman's Pond in Weymouth. I remember the large, angular living room with water and all the low-height furniture just made for relaxation. As I am writing this column, I realize that this is my

On the exterior, you might incorporate some Breezeblocks as a privacy screen in front and a carport to the side. A nice flagstone path will also fit right in.

The bones of your barn would be great to celebrate both the post and beam design and the open floor plan appropriate to these historic homes. Think horizontality, simplicity, clean straight lines, and function over form. Changes in elevation are also a must-have element in a mid-century home. Incorporate a connection to nature whenever you can: floor

I want to convert my barn into a mid-century modern wood paneling and a center fireplace which overlooked the to ceilings windows or lots of sliding glass doors on the back and sides (privacy rules in the front of these homes), concrete or terrazzo floors, stone fireplace, an earthy color palette, and quality wood paneling as a nod to the trees.

> Locate your living room to overlook the landscape. Built-in furniture and cabinets abound as do partial brick or glass walls. Choose Scandinavian design furniture with simple clean lines and limit decoration throughout. Shop for fine used furniture like this at Ramble Market in Waltham or visit Crate & Barrel or CB2 stores to purchase new.

> In your kitchen, opt for flat panel wood cabinets, geometric backsplash tiles, and retro appliances. The kitchen should be integrated into the living space. Set your table with pottery and ceramic dishware which were prevalent in

Steve Perdios Candidate For Ward 2 City Councillor

Steve Perdios, a lifelong Quincy Point resident and 25-year community activist, announces his candidacy for Ward 2 city councillor.

In this campaign announcement, Perdios said he attended Quincy Public Schools, graduated from Quincy High School, and went on to receive a B.S. in civil engineering from Northeastern University. He has been a civil engineer focusing on clean water, sewer, and drainage issues since 1995, and is currently employed at Dewberry Engineers Inc. in Boston.

Steve, the father of three girls - Casey (13), Molly (11), and Hannah (10) - and husband of recently appointed School Committee member Courtney Perdios, has deep roots in the Quincy Point community.

"I grew up in Ward 2 with my older brothers -Dan, Dave, and Don. It was a tight-knit community and a terrific place to be a kid. Now, my wife, Courtney, and I are raising our girls here in Ward 2. I am running for Ward 2 city councillor because I want to ensure the city continues attracting young families and people who are invested in keeping our neighborhoods strong."

Steve is calling for a tax break for homeowners. "For years now citizens have had to put up with development in every corner of the city. New housing units have brought in more tax revenue to the city coffers, but yet property taxes go up year after year. It's time for homeowners and small businesses to get a break - a dividend from having to put up with the constant construction and increased traffic headaches. I'm calling on our city officials to institute a 2-year moratorium on property tax increases. If elected, I won't support any city budget that doesn't include giving a tax break to homeowners."

Over his 25 years of community activism, Steve said he has focused on balancing the fast pace of development in the city with the need to maintain a high quality of life for city residents.

"As founder of the Ouincy Environmental Network, I spearheaded the movement to pass the Community Preservation Act (CPA) in Quincy, which has brought over $10M of state funding into our city. The CPA has allowed us to protect and many Quincy residents enjoy, and has also contributed millions of dollars toward historic preservation and affordable housing - aspects that enrich the character and livability of our city."

Steve said he was instrumental in preventing further development along Falls Boulevard - a proposal for an additional 140 rental units, which was opposed by residents in the surrounding neighborhoods. Stopping this development spared the Faxon Park area from weeks of blasting and decades of even worse traffic congestion along Falls Boulevard and at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Southern Artery. Steve then led the effort to bring $3.3 million of CPA funds (half from the state) to preserve this 13.6 acre piece of property. This marked the first expansion of Faxon Park in 70 years.

He said his work to preserve Faxon Park doesn't end there. Steve said he is also one of the founding members of the Friends of Faxon Park.

Steve has also worked to raise awareness of and expand funding to preserve the historic Souther Tide Mill. A long-time board member and Treasurer of the Friends of Souther Tide Mill, Steve helped to bring $170,000 in CPA funds for the Mill's rehabilitation. The recent improvements improve the open spaces so have directly improved the quality and aesthetic of this historic city gem.

Steve has been an active parishioner at St. Joseph's Parish his entire life. He taught religious education and youth ministry for 17 years and was a member of the Parish Council for four Steve also enjoys coaching his daughters and their teammates on their Quincy Youth Hockey and Quincy Youth Baseball teams.

As a civil engineer, Steve said he understands the finer points of maintaining a healthy city infrastructure.

"Roads, water mains, and traffic improvements will all be a high priority for me. Homeowners contribute their hard-earned tax dollars and rightfully expect a high level of city services in exchange. We have a great city, but we can do better when it comes to maintaining and improving our infrastructure. The condition of our roads and sidewalks from one end of the ward to the other is deplorable.

"When it comes to advocating for my constituents, I will be a truly independent voice and will be guided by the best interests of Ward 2 and the city. Our residents deserve no less."

For more information about Steve, or to volunteer for his campaign, call 617-877-5975 or email SPin-Quinzy@aol.com.

Quincy College Tuition Benefit Available For AFL-CIO, NAGE Members

Access to a college education for American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO} members and their families -as well as for members of the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) and their families - has just gotten easier, thanks to a partnership with Quincy College.

To help minimize the barrier that cost can present to pursuing a college education, Quincy College and the two unions have collaborated on a discounted tuition benefit. Union members and their immediate families can enjoy a saving of $300 per credit course on many Quincy College associate's degree and certificate programs with the exception of some selective and contract courses (nursing, medical laboratory technician, surgical technology, physical therapist assistant, EMT and paramedic education).

Associate's degrees can be completed in two years, and certificate programs in 18 months or less. Quincy College offers in-person and online courses throughout the year, and both new and transfer students with a high school diploma or a GED/HiSET are encouraged to apply.

50-Unit Building Proposed For Bennett Lane

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of the Zoning Board of Appeals balked at a 50-unit residential building proposed for Bennett Lane near the Braintree town line, citing concerns over the number of parking spaces included in the plan.

Developers Thomas Fitzgerald and John Whalen proposed constructing the new residential building at 17 Bennett Lane, which is located off Independence Avenue. The ZBA held an initial public hearing on the proposal on Aug. 10 and will take up the matter once again on Sept. 28.

The site at 17 Bennett Lane contains 23,872 square feet of land within an Industrial A zoning district, according to the city's online property records. A singlestory commercial building is presently located on the opers' attorney, said his clients were proposing to keep the foundation of the commercial building in place and construct five stories of residential units on top of it. A total of 50 condominium units would be located in the five upper floors of the new building.

Each of the units would include two bedrooms and two bathrooms. They would range in size between 1,264 and 1,637 square feet.

The developers set aside a total of 52 parking spaces in their proposal, including surface spaces and spaces located in a lower-level garage under the building, as well as bicycle racks. Foley said people would be drawn to the building given its proximity to the Quincy Adams MBTA station.

"This proposal is 300 yards away from the Quincy Adams train station," he said. "The applicant has built condos on this street and the adjacent Oak Grove Terrace. Through their history of selling units here, they have seen that most people who have bought here have one or no car.

"The reason they buy these units is because of the close proximity that it is to the train station."

The residential building would generate fewer vehicle trips in a given day than the current commercial building on site, Foley added.

"We also believe that this proposal will reduce the number of cars that come down the street on a given day," he stated. "The current warehouse and manufacturing plant has a constant, consistent flow of traffic that flows up and down the street all day."

One resident, John Rodophele of Grenwold Road, spoke during the public hearing on the matter. He said the proposed building was too large.

"It's insane how big we are building these buildings," Rodophele said. "I think something could go there, but I think it should be less dense. This is crazy

Martin Aikens, the chairperson of the ZBA, said he supported the proposal because it would cater to people looking for easy access to Boston.

"The train station is right there," he said. "People needs these units, really, to grab the train and shoot into Boston to make all that money and not live and pay the rent in the city of Bos-

Not all of the ZBA members were on board with the proposal, however. John Himmel called the number of parking spaces included in the plan insulting.

"I take great umbrage with 50 units and 52 parking spaces. Not everybody works in Boston anymore less and less people work in Boston. If young people are going to rent these, how many young people do you know that don't each have an automobile," Himmel

"I think it is insulting to the people of Quincy to put 50 units with 52 parking spaces there. I am not in favor of this."

The board then voted on the proposal. Three members - Aikens, Michael Covais and Charles O'Brien - voted in favor of the proposal. Two members, Himmel and Russell Chin, voted in opposition. A 3-2 vote would mean that the project did not have enough support to pass and the board rejected the proposal.

Following the vote, Aikens called for a motion to reconsider to allow the developers a chance to revise their initial proposal and return to the board in six weeks. That motion to reconsider passed unanimously.

Chin said the applicant should go back to the drawing board and reduce the size of the building.

"If everyone else agrees that one space per unit if insufficient, then I think you are looking at a little bit of a reduction in density," Chin said. "I'm not saying an enormous amount of a reduction, but a reduction nevertheless so that there is at least visitor parking, there is at least some overflow parking, there is space for landscaping."

In addition to approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals, the developers must also get permission to construct the new building from the Planning Board.

Ferry Service Is Major Priority, Ayers Says

By SCOTT JACKSON

During a recent interview, Rep. Bruce Ayers identified bringing full-time ferry service to Squantum Point Park as one of his biggest priorities. Ayers also said he is working with federal lawmakers to see if funds from a $1 trillion infrastructure package pending on Capitol Hill could be used to support the proposal.

For the past six years, the city of Quincy has partnered with the town of Winthrop to provide seasonal ferry service between the two communities and Boston. The ferry currently departs Quincy five times each weekday - at 6:50, 7:40 and 10:50 a.m. and 4:40 and 6:25 p.m. The first four trips service Boston's Central Wharf, located near the New England Aquarium, and the Seaport District, while the last ferry trip of the day services only Winthrop.

Since the ferry service, known as the Marina Bay Ferry, first launched in 2016, the city has worked with the state to extend Commander Shea Boulevard to Squantum Point Park. The state funded the project as a mitigation measure for the mixed-use development at the North Quincy MBTA station.

That project, Ayers said, was an important step for bringing full-time ferry service to the state-owned Squantum Point Park because commuters no longer need to travel through Marina Bay to reach it.

"It's been six years now that we have been working in partnership with the town of Winthrop. Over those with the state, DCR, we've worked on establishing better infrastructure," said Ayers, a Quincy Democrat.

"Commander Shea Boulevard now goes right into Squantum Point Park. It has its own access road. That was a concern to the residents of Marina Bay, they wanted to make sure they had their own access road to take some of the traffic off the streets there. We were able to do that, which was a major step.

"We are in a unique predicament where we've got close to 900 spots, a pier, a dock. A lot of emphasis now is being put on coastal communities and water transportation. There have been studies by the Pioneer Institute and the Boston Harbor [Now] that say water transportation is the way to go. We are trying to capitalize on that. I got $110,000 in the House budget to support the ferry for this year."

The US Senate approved a $1 trillion infrastructure bill in a 69-30 vote on Aug. 9; the measure must still be approved by the US House of Representatives. Ayers said he is working with members of Massachusetts' congressional delegation to see if funds from the bill could be used to support ferry service. He has also talked with his colleagues from other coastal communities in the Greater Boston area to discuss a regional partnership for ferry service.

"The federal bill that was passed yesterday, the major transportation infrastructure bill, we are trying to see if there are any monies - we six years, the city, working are working with Congressman Lynch and obviously Senator Markey to see if there is some monies that would be available that we would qualify for," Ayers

"Boston has some of the worst traffic in the country - we've all been there, we've all seen it. We've got waterfront access to Downtown Boston. Right now, there are two stops -Winthrop being a third. I'm talking with my colleagues like Joan Meschino down in Hingham and others on the North Shore to see if they would be interested in partnering. UMass Boston has expressed an interest. There is a lot of potential there for the program to grow.

"We will be exploring all" the funding opportunities, both state and federal, but the city, the mayor, Councillor Harris, [state Sen.] John Keenan – everybody – is all for water transportation."

Ayers said the residents and business owners in his district support bringing full-time ferry service to Squantum Point Park.

"The goal is to establish a full-time ferry. I talk to the folks out in Squantum, Marina Bay, North Quincy. They love concept to be able to hop on the ferry, whether to go back and forth for work or for recreational purposes," he said.

"When you talk to the business owners out at Marina Bay or the stakeholders even like Boston Scientific, they like the options to have their employees go back and

"When you look at the boardwalk businesses down at Marina Bay, they love the fact that tourism would be coming over. It would be nice for someone to have that opportunity to come from Boston to Marina Bay for the afternoon and solicit our services out there - take advantage of the restaurants. The same with some of the folks that might want to go to Boston or the North Shore, Hingham, Plymouth, other areas of town. It wouldn't be too much work to maybe accommodate some short-range goals there."

Most riders who use the ferry are commuters headed to work in Boston, Ayers said, though some people do use it recreationally.

"I think the highest volume of people are probably your workers going in town finding another method of commuting that are able to do it, that it is conducive for them," he said.

"But, I do hear a lot of people that will utilize it to go in town, maybe go to lunch and recreationalize. It's just another great option that we need to take full advantage of given that we are a coastal community."

ON THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

QEA Endorses Perdios, Speakman In School Committee Race

At a special vote of the Quincy Education Association's (OEA) Executive Board on Aug. 12, the Executive Board unanimously approved the recommendations of the Candidate Recommendation Committee to endorse School Committee candidates Courtney Perdios and Liz Speakman in this fall's municipal election.

The OEA announced the endorsements in a state-

"A current School Committee member, Courtney Perdios has proven to be a tremendous addition to the School Committee during her time of service. She has impressed QEA with her ability to ask intelligent and perceptive questions and to arrive at thoughtful and informed decisions, and with her constant desire to seek input from all involved groups to broaden her understanding of issues and to help formulate plans. In a time afflicted by a deeply divided political climate, Courtney is a throwback to more collegial and productive times, when people of differing opinions would speak and listen to one another because doing so is the best way to decide how to make the decisions that are in the best public interest.

"Liz Speakman also impressed QEA with her honesty and thoughtfulness. Her professional background in social work, with a passion for working to help people recover from trauma, gives her a perspective that is particularly needed in this current moment, as students and staff stand poised to return to school in the aftermath of perhaps the hardest and most traumatizing year in the history of American public education. It is clear to QEA that her background and drive will make her an invaluable voice in the important conversations the school committee will need to have this year to address the challenges that we will face in navigating this unpredictable year of educational transition.

"The members of the Executive Board and the Can-Recommendation Committee unanimously believe that these two candidates will expand upon and enrich the important conversations taken up by the School Committee as it does work that is so vital to the long-term growth and success of the great city of Quincy. We encourage all of our members registered to vote in Quincy to cast ballots for these two splendid candidates in the preliminary election on Sept. 14 so that they can vote for them again in November to seat them for full terms on the School Committee."

Tina Cahill Questions QEA Recommendation Committee's Process Of Endorsement For School Committee

On August 12, 2021, the QEA Recommendation Committee released a memo to its members endorsing two of the seven candidates running for the Ouincy School Committee in the fall election.

In their endorsement, they state, "speak and listen to one another because doing so is the best way to decide how to make the decisions that are in the best public interest."

AAA Offers Tips For End Of Summer Travel And Beyond

Americans returned to travelers it's important to retravel in droves this summer, with recent AAA Travel bookings up at least 11% over 2019 levels, and even more people planning trips for 2022 and beyond. As summer comes to a close, travel volumes around Labor Day are expected to remain high. Though, with a resurgence of COVID-19 cases attributed to the delta variant, some travelers are wondering if they should take that last summer trip or continue with their future main informed and be flexible as policies and guidelines continue to evolve.

"Whether and how to travel is a very personal decision. By and large, people who were planning to travel are still taking their trips, while being mindful to take precautions to protect themselves and others," said Mary Maguire, director of Public and Government Affairs at AAA Northeast. "The hottest summer travel destinations by far have travel plans. AAA reminds been Mexico, Hawaii and

Scout Thanks Community For Eagle Scout Project Support

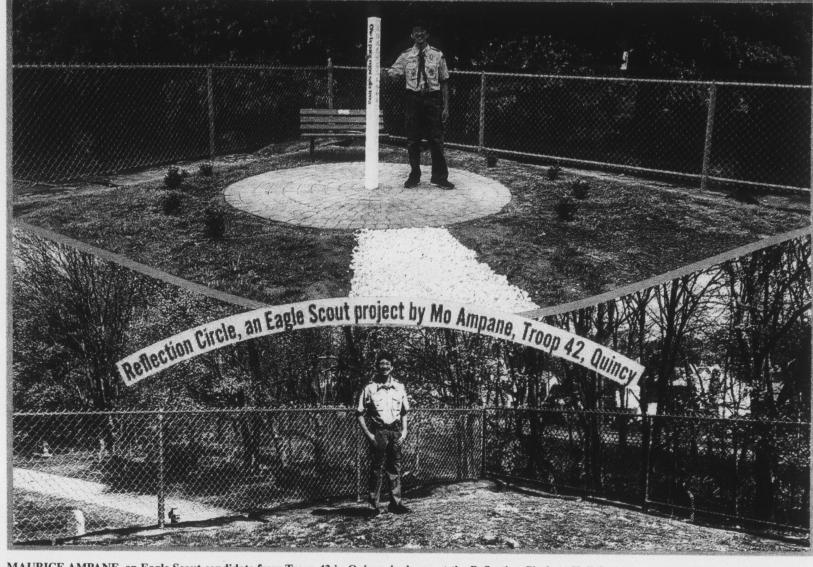

My name is Maurice Ampane and I am an Eagle Scout candidate from Troop 42 in Quincy.

One of the requirements to obtain the rank of Eagle Scout is the Eagle Scout project. A key part of this project is fundraising. In the last week of May I set the goal to raise $2000 from community donations. The Quincy Sun graciously included an article on my project to help with fundraising. As a result, we raised over $3500 through Gofundme, Venmo, and cash donations, smashing the $2000 goal. Any and all excess funds will be used to support Troop 42 in Quincy and the growth of the community's youth. Thank you so much for the overwhelming support!

Throughout the month of June many scouts and I finished putting together the project. The project itself is a reflection area in the back left corner of Hall Cemetery in West Quincy. Before work could start, a massive boulder had to be removed from the project site. Huge thanks to the city's cemetery department, Commissioner David Murphy, Mayor Koch, and General Foreman Scott Logan, for removing the boulder, digging out a majority of the hole, and supplying us with sand for the foundation.

On day 1 many scouts came out and created the foundation, assembled the paver circle, installed the peace pole (including four languages: English, Italian, Spanish, Mandarin) and bench, and planted the bushes for the reflection area.

The following weekend a white rock path was put in connecting the paver circle to the road. Finally, a dedication plaque was installed and topsoil and grass seed was put in to beautify the area. The following few weeks included many trips to water the grass and bushes. After just over 200 hours of work! The reflection area came out beautifully! I highly encourage you to visit the project in Hall Cemetery if you get the chance.

Scout project is to, in short, demonstrate and improve upon a candidate's leadership skills such as planning, project management, and delegation. While at the same time, providing a service to the community. Planning this project was a process over a year long starting back in March of

Through this process, I have learned how to write up an effective plan, to see challenges as less worldbreaking, and the importance of communication. In the execution of the project, I learned the significance of delegation, since there was no way I would be able to finish the project in a timely manner on my own. Thank you so much to my project

Coach Ray Theberge, my parents, my scoutmaster Kevin Gillespie, and Troop 42 as a whole for helping with the planning and execution of the project. I would not have been capable of creating and leading a project like this had I not joined scouting and learned the necessary skills from Troop 42's youth and adult leadership.

This project, while challenging, was an amazing opportunity for me that I would not have gotten to experience without the support of family, friends, and the community. Ultimately, I believe my project will support the families interred at Hall Cemetery and the community members of West Quincy.

my childhood years. Mostly doodling and primitive drawings, but nothing both calmed me and excited me

When I was 12, my parents had the wallpaper taken off from the living room and what was left were four blank white plastered walls. But what I saw was 4 huge canvases which I proceeded to draw figures on, lifesized, cartoon- like characters in different poses and clothing. My dad bought me oil paints, paint brushes and canvases to use instead of our house's walls. I created a painting of a man. I don't know who he was or why I painted it, but it just "happened."

My dad saw it and felt I had a real talent and entered my painting into an art contest sponsored by Frantic Framers. Much to my surprise, I won first prize in my age group! This recognition and my dad's support, launched a new way for me to explore this talent and love of art. Dorothy Quincy Homestead Fourth Outdoor Historic Tour Saturday

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead Committee will offer the fourth in a series of outdoor tours at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 21.

Docents will welcome visitors and answer their questions as stories of the Edmund Quincy Family who first settled on the property in the 1630s are shared. Docents will also be recognizing the August wedding anniversary of Dorothy Quincy and John Hancock.

Dorothy Quincy was considered to be beautiful, cultured and according to a mention in the memoirs of the artist, John Singleton Copley, who painted her portrait in 1772, "among the distinguished women of the time ..." Little wonder she caught the attention of John Hancock, patriot and wealthy Boston merchant. When Dorothy's mother died in 1769, Lydia Henchman Hancock, aunt to John, did not survive the ravages soon became Dorothy's chaperone and greatly influenced the budding romance between Dorothy and John.

In April 1775, when word of the skirmishes in Lexington and Concord between patriots and British troops reached Thaddeus Burr in Fairfield, CT, he prepared to welcome his friend John Hancock temporary refuge from British troops at his homestead. Back in Lexington, Dorothy Quincy (a.k.a Dolly) and Aunt Lydia, witnessed the Battle of Lexington from an upstairs bedroom at the old Hancock parsonage. The two ladies soon left Lexington to find shelter at the Burr mansion where they were entertained by Thaddeus and Eunice Burr for many months. And although John Hancock was consumed by his role as president of the Continental Congress during that summer of 1775, he wrote frequently to his dear Dolly urging her to write him long letters. When Hancock was finally free to return from his duties in Philadelphia to Fairfield, he and Dorothy wed at the Burr mansion on the ground by the British in July 1779. Sometime after the fire, John Hancock returned to Fairfield and urged his old friend Thaddeus Burr to rebuild. He did. Although the rebuilt man-years, it continues to be a historic wedding site.

On Aug. 21st, the tours of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead property at 34 Butler Rd., Quincy, will end promptly at 2 p.m. A suggested donation of $5 to the Homestead is greatly appreciated. Visitors are encouraged to stop by the carriage house during their tour to see the lovingly restored Hancock carriage, a gift to John Hancock in 1777 from the owners of an American privateer, the Civil Usage. However, due to on-going construction and conservation initiatives at the Homestead, the interior of the house will remain closed to the public.

There are no public restroom facilities available on site. Check the website nscdama.org/quincy-homestead or the Facebook page Quincy Homestead 1686 for Sadly, the Burr mansion any schedule changes.

In 1995, I was introduced to an amazing artist, Edwina Caci. I cannot describe how much I learned from her. She was an amazing teacher and a huge support. Once my children were grown, I picked up my love of sketching again. Then, in 2014, I was visiting the Plymouth Art Gallery when I spotted a painting that I knew from across the room was an Edwina Caci painting. I inquired at the desk if they had any contact info on Edwina, in which I found she actually taught classes right there at the Gallery! I immediately signed up and was reunited with my teacher.

Since then, I have been able to produce many portraits that I have had the honor of having hang in the Gallery. I have sold several, but I primarily create what I am inspired by. I am now retired and able to spend more time with my art. I have been blessed with a wee bit of talent and a plethora of support from friends and family. As a new member of the Quincy Art Association, I am excited to continue to create for the sheer joy of seeing my drawings give pleasure to all who view

Mask Guidance for Travelers

The CDC recently updated its guidance on maskwearing, advising people in areas with high COVID-19 transmission to wear masks indoors, regardless of vaccination status. You will be required to wear a mask on planes, buses, trains, and other forms of public transportation traveling into, within, or out of the United States, and in U.S. transportation hubs such as airports and stations. Additionally, some states and cities have updated their mask and other travel requirements.

"Masks should be at the top of your packing list, since guidelines and requirements will vary from place to place," continued Maguire. "Also bring along disinfecting wipes, hand sanitizer and a thermometer enhanced its Diamond into help protect and monitor your health. For road trips, also consider packing water and extra snacks to reduce the need to stop along your

Modes of Travel -What to Expect

Road trips can offer more flexibility than some other modes of travel, but it's still important to plan ahead for travel by car. Understand the impact COVID-19 has on cities and states you are traveling through and if there are any restrictions in place. To be informed, check out AAA's COVID-19 IripTik.AAA.com

For those traveling by air, the CDC advises that most viruses and other germs do not spread easily on flights because of how air circulates and is filtered on airplanes, in addition to universal use of masks throughout the air travel experience. AAA recommends travelers consider enrolling in TSA PreCheck, to help expedite your time through potentially crowded airports this summer.

Recent AAA Travel hotel bookings have increased almost 50% over 2019 levels, and these travelers are being met with a different hotel experience. In fact, the pandemic has had a vast impact on consumers' expectations for cleanliness during their stay. As a result, AAA has spections. Hotels that meet AAA's standards for cleanliness, condition and new surface cleanliness testing are now recognized as Inspected Clean and then assigned a Diamond designation.

Travelers will be able to find Inspected Clean hotels on AAA.com/Diamonds to help plan their trips later this fall. In the meantime, look for AAA's Best of Housekeeping badge – awarded to the top 25% of Diamond designated hotels for cleanliness - for extra peace of mind. Also, prior to any hotel stay, call ahead to ensure Travel Restrictions Map and your hotel is open and ask what precautions they are taking to protect guests.

International Travel With the success of the vaccine rollout and more countries opening to American travelers, AAA Travel agents have noted a significant increase in inquiries and bookings for international travel, especially for 2022 – with Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Greece, and European river cruises topping the list of international travel destinations.

"For those planning to travel internationally, AAA advises booking early and working with a travel agent. Demand and pricing are on the rise for 2022 and inventory is likely to be limited in top destinations and itineraries," said Maguire.

As borders begin to reopen and countries start to loosen their travel restrictions, the CDC notes that international travel poses additional risks. If you are fully vaccinated, you should continue to follow the CDC's recommendations for traveling safely and get tested 3-5 days after traveling internationally. You do not need to get tested before leaving the United States unless your destination requires it, and you do not need to self-quarantine after arriving in the United

All air passengers coming to the United States, including U.S. citizens and fully vaccinated people, are required to have a negative COVID-19 test result no more than 3 days before travel or documentation of recovery from COVID-19 in the past 3 months before they board a flight to the United States.

The U.S. State Department is also warning Americans of delays in processing passport applications. It may take up to 18 weeks to get your new passport, and 12 weeks for "expedited" service. As a result, it's recommended that you submit your passport application at least six months before planned travel.

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I have a 1998 Subaru Impreza 2.5 RS coupe that is rusting in the rear quarter panels. Subaru only has the front panels available, and my autobody guy says he cannot find high quality aftermarket rear panels. Would you be able to tell me where we could look?

The autobody shop has most likely tried all or the best sources for parts which leaves you with two options. The first option is removing all of the rusted metal and fabricate patch panels. This does take time and talent to get a solid repair. The second option is to use a replacement panel and rust proof it prior to assembly. The aftermarket panel fit may not be exact and may also require some extra finessing to make it look good.

My Dodge Caravan has been smoking white smoke and almost but not quite overheated. I had someone look at it and the diagnosis is the engine needs at least one maybe both head gaskets. I only want the van to last through the fall. In years past I solved radiator leaks with some additive that looked like aluminum powder. Is there any magic product that I can add to the engine that will stop the head gasket leak?

A neighbor of mine had a very similar situation and also didn't want to spend the money on a vehicle that was nearing the end of its life. Some shops had told me about a pourin product called Blue Devil. The instructions are simple (you should remove the engine thermostat) and allow the engine to cool overnight, drain some coolant and add the product and let the engine run for 45 minutes. Then let the engine sit overnight, before restarting it. This Blue Devil product in the case of my neighbors van seemed to work-no smoke and coolant level is staying full. Shops tell me they have had about a 75 percent success rate. For less than $50 it is worth a try.

I am planning to put turbo or supercharger onto the engine in my project Chevy Blazer. I want to add horsepower and torque but don't want to destroy the rest of the vehicle. I also have plans to upgrade the brakes and add larger exhaust. What else should I do?

It really depends on the vehicle you are starting with. Adding a supercharger to a tired engine will give you more power but will also shorten its life. Before I spent any money, I would join a forum and talk with members who did similar upgrades. One of the more active that I have read is www.gm-trucks.com. You may want to improve the cooling system and even upgrade the transmission and change gearing. It really depends on how far you imagination/plans and budget can take you.

I recently read your answer about octane rating and possible damage to a Mercedes from using the wrong gas. My Acura states in the owner's manual and on the gas door that 91 octane fuel is recommended. My partner and I argue over this; I don't think it is necessary and he says it is. This bothers me for two reasons: it states recommended, not required (I take things very literally) and there is no such thing (at least in my area) as 91 octane so he uses 93 octane which is more expensive.

AAA engineers completed a study that concluded that in cars that recommend premium fuel, there may be a slight horsepower/fuel economy benefit of one to three percent, although in most cases there was no difference. Unless you are towing a heavy trailer on hilly terrain or a competitive racer I have found no difference in performance and fuel economy in day-to-day driving using 87 octane fuel when premium fuel is recommended. Years ago, when premium fuel only cost 10 cents more than regular fuel it made some financial sense. Today with premium fuel costing 20-60 cents more than regular any mileage gains are lost to the extra cost of the fuel. One note of caution: for any vehicle owner, if your vehicle owner's manual requires premium fuel use it, but if it is recommended our studies show that for most drivers it is just money wasted.

I have a 1974 Chevy Camaro that I have owned the last 43 years it has been sitting in a garage idle the last 15 years. What are your thoughts on it?

The 1974 Chevrolet Camaro is not the most collectable Camaro. Even the most collectible 1974 Z-28 was underpowered compared to other vehicles of the time. Someone I know had almost the same car that sat for just about the same time, and because of sentimental value decided to restore it. Every rubber seal needed replacement, the engine and transmission needed rebuilding, there were rusted out floors and the car needed a complete repaint. All of the brake system and as well as steering and suspension parts needed replacement. Plus, the interior was moldy and needed more than cleaning. When it was done it came out great, but realistically the cost of restoration was twice the value of the car. Because he had the money, and it was his high school car he thought it was worth it. To me he is going to need to keep it another 40 years to see any return on his investment. At this point I would have it towed to a restoration shop and have them evaluate the entire car and give you an idea (and it will only be an idea-there is always hidden damage/rust/ mechanical issues) what it will cost.

I have a new Mercedes Benz E63 AMG and recently I lent the car to my brother. When he returned it, he had it washed and filled the gas tank. After driving the car for a few days, it started to run rough, and the check engine light came on. The dealer told me it was because my brother used regular not premium 93 octane fuel. The dealer needed to clean out the fuel system and replace all the fuel injectors (at my cost). I don't blame my brother, but can just one tank of 87 octane fuel cause this much

It is important to use premium fuel in cars that require it, but one tank full is not going to cause a problem. Here is what is stated in the AMG owner's manual: as a temporary measure, if the recommended fuel is not available, you may also use unleaded regular gasoline. I believe the issue was not the wrong gas but contaminated gas. I would go talk with the gas station where your brother filled up. The contamination would not be just your car. I'm sure there are

I have been hearing about the new small truck from Ford, the Maverick. What do you know of it and what do you think? Is it really "Ford Tough?"

I have always been a fan of true compact trucks, and I think there is a market for a somewhat basic truck that can handle day-to-day driving, is easy to park, can handle trips to the home improvement center and is not outrageously expensive. The Maverick is front wheel drive (all-wheel drive is optional), with a fuel-efficient hybrid engine all for about $20,000. Regarding "Ford-Tough" time will tell but Ford is confident this latest Maverick will not disappoint truck fans. I was able to look at a very early production Maverick recently and based on what I saw, Ford will sell as many as they can make.

We have a 2001 Toyota Corolla with 170,000 miles on it and some minor rust and some city dents, and only one speaker for the radio and only AM works. Other than that, it's a perfect car for me since I like the way it drives. The check engine light has been on for over a year and the car won't pass inspection next January. Do you think it's worth it to have that fixed or should we just donate the car? If we can get the check engine light off, any thoughts about the radio?

I would certainly get an idea what the problem is. At 20 years old and 170,000 the car could be at the end of its life. Since the car runs well it is possible the issue is with the evaporative emissions system. This is very common for the Corolla that the purge valve fails. When that system has an issue, the engine will run fine, but the check engine light will be on. Now of course this is just one possibility. At this point I would want to get a diagnostic check of the car as well as an overall evaluation. If the car looks like it is safe and can be repaired for $500 or so it may be money well spent. As far as the radio goes, mount a Bluetooth speaker and listen to music from your phone - it is the cheapest alternative to a new radio and speakers.

I have a 2004 Ford Explorer and the air conditioner is not working. The air coming out of the vents is cold but there isn't much of it. The fan speeds all work, and the vent flaps seem to open and close. Could the system be clogged up and not letting the air flow?

I would start with looking at the blower fan. The fan is a cage design and I have seen some fans as they get old the vanes break off or the get so coated with dirt, they can't move the air. The fan is pretty easy to remove only four or five screws and while it is out test to see that it is also spinning properly. The fan bearings could also be seizing up and slowing the fan down.

I have a 2008 Dodge Sebring convertible, and rarely do I put the top down, but the last time I did something broke. One of the neighbors forced a little cover and got the top to close. What can be wrong?

I helped a neighbor with what sounds like the same problem. When the top opens there is a retractable trim piece on the left and right sides. It covers the top mechanism, and it has a spring and slides on a 4-inch track. On this car, I removed the trim cover, removed the sliding piece allowing the spring to retract and now the top opens and closes normally. I needed to screw the top trim in place with a couple of small screws and although it isn't quite as pretty as the left side, the top works fine.

I see these small cars with trailer hitches and never see them towing a trailer. In fact I'm not sure a VW Beetle or Mazda Miata can tow a trailer. Why would someone put a trailer hitch on a small car, if they don't need it?

A trailer hitch or receiver may never be used for towing. Years ago, I had a small SUV and installed a trailer hitch receiver to mount a rack to move a snow blower from my house to my mothers. The rack was also handy for carrying items that were dirty that I didn't want in the car. Other people will use the receiver to mount a bike rack or carry beach chairs. Some people will occasionally tow with small cars. I did see a Miata pulling a big JetSki (probably not recommended by Mazda) out on the highway recently.

I have a 2012 Nissan Altima coupe and recently a headlight bulb burned out. I bought a bulb and went to replace it and can't figure out how you get to the bulb. Someone told me you have to take the bumper off; can that be true?

In this case you do not take the bumper off (in some cars it is necessary) but there is a little extra work. You will need to remove the wheel and then remove the fender liner. Once the fender liner is removed you will be able to see the bulb. Unscrew the bulb holder remove the old bulb and then carefully install the new bulb. Keep dirt and oil off the bulb and don't touch it with your hands, use gloves or a clean towel. The oils from your fingers can cause the bulb to overheat

Would you buy a homemade car? I recently saw a Cobra replica for sale, and it looked good but then I found out the owner built it himself. It seems like there could be a multitude of mechanical and safety problems with something like this.

Yes I would buy a home built car, but there are some caveats. Like any used car I would have it inspected by a garage who had some familiarity with the base vehicle. Then it depends on the kit. I recently was at Factory Five Racing and saw how their kits are made. The frames and bodies were well done and they have years of experience refining their products and the knowledge to help their customers. Then you need to look at the drivetrain and suspension, was it new, did it come from a donor vehicle and how was it installed? If it looks good or looks like a project you want to finish, buy it and have fun.

My 2002 Chevy Avalanche 2500 with the 8.1-liter engine keeps turning on the check engine light and throwing code P1125 and when this happens the truck goes into reduced power mode. The accelerator position sensor has been replaced four times over a several years. The last one, a GM part, only lasted six months before the codes started again. Is there something else that could be causing this failure? At $3-$400 a repair its getting expensive. My other frustration is the local shop tech's only want to replace the sensor not look for additional problems. Any help would be great.

Unlike some vehicles there is no mechanical connection between the accelerator pedal and the throttle body at the engine. There are three sensors in the accelerator pedal assembly. Three separate signals, one that is redundant. Due to the redundancy if one sensor detects a problem the engine will operate normally, with the check engine light on. If two or more diagnostic codes are set involving more than one accelerator pedal pressure sensor the "reduced engine power" message will illuminate. Although the accelerator pressure sensor is the most common issue, other possibilities include wiring to the sensor or the throttle position sensor which is part of the valve body assembly.

I have a crazy idea of turning a vehicle into a "tinyhouse." With what I learned from the pandemic, I don't need to go to the office (my employer has gone 100 percent remote) and can work anywhere. I was thinking of subletting my apartment and buying a used Mercedes van or maybe a Ram Promaster van, adding cooking, bathing facilities and a sleeping/work area. I then wanted to add a solar panel and invertor for power. What do you think?

The idea has certainly become much more popular. Airstream trailers actually have a model that is half trailer and half office, just for that reason. On YouTube there are videos of everything from converted first generation Ford Broncos to van conversions, so it is certainly doable. On my radio program several years ago, I met Josh Theberge who converted a Promaster Van and travelled the country working remotely for several years, eventually building a second van. His experiences are pretty amazing. https:// www.podomatic.com/podcasts/johnfpaul/episodes/2018-12-31T18_11_23-08_00

I was talking with my buddies the other day about oil changes which most of us do ourselves. When it came to filter choice everyone has an opinion. I told one friend that I use a Fram filter, and he said the "orange can of death," implying the filter was terrible. What do you think and would you use one on your car?

Fram has been in business since 1934 and owns a huge percentage of the aftermarket filter sales. If the filters were poorly made, they would not still be around. Have I used Fram filters? Yes. But I will also say, if you have any doubts, use a factory oil filter.

Everyone seems to have an SUV but I like a small sedan. I have read that you have recommended to readers to move to a small SUV for ease of entry, versatility and a better view of the road. Still, I am looking for a small sedan. I have narrowed my choices based on availability to a Honda Civic, Toyota Corolla Nissan Sentra and Hvundai Elantra. Any thoughts on these cars?

I recently evaluated the newly updated 2022 Honda Civic and found it to be a delight. The car rides and handles well, is comfortable and very roomy for a small car. My only complaints are a bit of road noise, and I still would like to see an actual tuning knob for the radio. The Toyota Corolla and Hyundai Elantra are always a good choice. Personally I haven't driven the Nissan Sentra in a few years, but other reviewers put it closer to the bottom of the list.

I just recently purchased a used Buick Regal with all-wheel-drive. I really like the car but compared to the 10-year-old Buick I traded in this car has a clunk when shifting between reverse and drive. I went back to the dealer, and they said it was normal. What do you think?

Buick considers some clunk normal and although some customers may find it objectionable if there are no worn components it is normal and should have no effect on durability and performance. Also since your new car is allwheel-drive there are more components interacting with each other which will generate more noise.

I have a 2009 Honda Fit, which I just changed oil, yet the indicated dash still says my oil condition is now at 20%. How do I return it to 100% oil life since the oil and filter are new?

Every car is a little different when it comes to resetting maintenance reminders. Some require a scan tool and others like your Honda are menu driven. Turn the ignition switch to the ON position. Press the select/reset knob repeatedly until the engine oil life is displayed. Press the select/reset knob for about 10 seconds. The engine oil life and the maintenance item code(s) will blink. Press the select/reset knob for another 5 seconds. The maintenance item code(s) will disappear, and the engine oil life will reset to "100."

How many miles is it safe to switch to synthetic oil? I have 6,000 miles on my 2019 car and want to switch to synthetic oil.

There was a time where it was thought switching to synthetic oil early in the life of an engine would not allow the piston rings to seat properly. Today, we see cars come from the factory with synthetic oil in the engine and the engines are fine. Call me a little old-fashioned I typically wait, depending on the car, until the second oil change before switching to full synthetic oil. Since your car is two years old you can switch to synthetic oil with no worries.

I have a car that my brother gave me and wanted to know if it's worth putting money into to fix it or just get another used car. The car I have is a 2007 Dodge Nitro SLT 6 cylinder with all-wheel drive. The check engine and airbag lights are on, it failed emissions, brakes need to be done, it idles rough. The belts I see look like they need replacing. Plus, the two rear windows will not go

You easily listed what could amount to several thousands of dollars' worth of repairs. Considering the car is 14 years old and was not the best vehicle built by Chrysler at the time, even as a free car the repairs may not be a good investment. At this point the best money you can spend is to have a good repair shop give the car a thorough inspection and get a detailed repair estimate of the overall cost of the repairs. As a general rule if the cost of the repairs exceeds 50 percent of the value of the car, it is not a good investment.

My daughter recently bought a 2006 Acura TL with 206,000 miles on it. I have two questions. The owner's manual says to use premium fuel. If she does not, what are the consequences? With 206,000 miles what oil should she use? The owner's manual says 5w20 oil, but should she use conventional, synthetic blend or full synthetic? I had heard that using full synthetic in a high mileage car will cause oil to leak from seals. Is that true?

If the owner's manual or on the fuel door states premium fuel required you need to use it or risk engine failure due to detonation (pinging). If the manual only recommends premium, use 87 octane fuel. The car's computer system will adjust the engine systems to prevent any damage. AAA tests show that any loss in fuel economy is vastly offset by the reduced cost of regular fuel verses premium. Synthetic oil will not cause a leak, but it may find one and make it more noticeable. If this were my car and as much as I am a fan of synthetic oil I would use conventional oil and change it as recommended in the owner's manual.

I just read a column. I'm desperate, and hoped for some clear thinking advice. My 1996 Dodge pickup truck is in great shape, looks impressive and starts every time. It has been relegated to dump runs and trips to the beach with the dog. My dashboard, being a Dodge, disintegrated into chips and dust. I can't seem to locate a replacement for a reasonable price. It ends up at like $1,000 for a piece of plastic, not including the installation. I don't care what it "looks like" so I am willing to think way out of the box. My question is there a way to find a dash that will basically fit - Ford, Toyota, Chevy or whatever. I'm one step away from using cardboard cutouts covered with resin and fiberglass. Thanks for your time I know this is a weird request.

Not really a weird request. You have a couple of options that are relatively inexpensive. You could get a dash pad cover (looks like carpet) ($50 online) that covers most of the dash. The second option is a complete overlay of the dash, about $150 online. The overlay requires some prep and patience when installing but both could be workable solution. If the dash is really deteriorated, yes you could make something up with fiberglass. Hotrod shops build custom dashboards all the time.

Ayers Encouraged Bridge Alternatives Being Considered

By SCOTT JACKSON

Rep. Bruce Ayers said he is encouraged that state officials are looking at sites that could provide an alternative to a proposed recovery campus on Long Island and that Boston's acting mayor has said she is open to using ferries to access the island should the campus be built.

Then Boston Mayor Marty Walsh unveiled plans to rebuild the Long Island bridge three years ago. The bridge, if built, would connect Long Island to Moon Island, the latter of which is only accessible via Squantum and falls within Quincy's city limits. The bridge would provide access to a new recovery campus on Long Island.

Citing the impact the rebuilt bridge could have on traffic in Squantum and other parts of Quincy, Ayers and other elected officials from Quincy have opposed Walsh's proposal to rebuild the bridge since its inception and have urged Boston officials to consider using water transportation to access Long Island instead. The permitting for the new bridge is currently the subject of ongoing litigation between the two neighboring cities.

In a recent interview, Ayers noted Walsh's successor, Acting Mayor Kim Janey, who is among the candidates seeking a full term as Boston's mayor this fall, in May told reporters that ferry service was being considered as an option to reach a new recovery campus on Long Island.

"For the first time in almost 30 years, what you are hearing is Acting Mayor Janey, and even some of the other candidates, are now looking at it a little differently. They are starting too, I think, evaluate other potential options," Ayers said.

"She had an article in the Globe and Herald about a month ago saying she would be open to a ferry, which we certainly liked because we know it is a more economically feasible, environmentally friendly way to get to the island."

Walsh's administration in 2018 said the bridge would cost $92 million to construct and would be done using only city funds. During the recent interview, Ayers said the cost of the bridge could top $125 million and noted Boston officials have not said how much it would cost to open the new recovery campus on the island.

"The Long Island Bridge, rebuilding that bridge, is just the first phase. The second phase is once they have access to the island, no one has really taken a comprehensive study of what it is going to cost to build these treatment centers," he said.

"The buildings out there are all outdated and the infrastructure is pretty much demolished, so the cost associated with that could be astronomical. It could be more than the bridge. The time associated with that it's already been years, it is currently all tied up in lawsuits, who knows how much longer that is going to go but in the meantime, people are going without treatment. Recovery centers are maxed

Ayers said he was encouraged that state officials in April presented initial plans to lease the shuttered Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain to a developer or non-profit who could provide a range of services, including treatment for substance-use disorder.

"You've got a pre-existing building there that is not being utilized that has the infrastructure - dormitorystyle rooms, cafeterias, conference rooms, things that could be potentially utilized for a fraction of the cost and setup in a fraction of the time," Ayers said of the Shattuck Hospital site.

"They have closer access to the T, the buses, other centers that come into play downtown. It would be something that I think the candidates will probably be talking a lot more about. We're trying to force the issue, obviously, because I think it makes a lot of sense. It saves money, it saves time and it saves lives at the end of the day."

Boston officials should look at other alternatives as well, Ayers added.

"There are two or three other locations that fit that kind of bill," he said. "What Boston should be doing and I think they could be doing - maybe some of the candidates are already addressing this - is doing like a building audit to find out what is available, what would meet the footprint, what is in close proximity to people who are going to need access to get to these places and then try to see if it is feasible to address everything that is associated with it - what is the cost associated with it, what is the time to get in there not only for addiction treatment, but for mental illness, for everything that we are encompassing here. There are other ways to address it. Certainly, I think, that money would be much better spent.

"I think now you will probably hear more from some of the candidates because there is a lot of pressure on them now to address the Methadone Mile. Marty Walsh had a plan. Mayor Menino had a plan. It is encouraging now that Mayor Janey is starting to look at other options and I think, from what I read in the paper, a lot of the candidates are being pressured to come up with other plans. I am encouraged by it."

Should Boston go forward with plans to open the recovery campus on Long Island, Ayers said it would better served by ferries than a new bridge.

"To build it...could be looking five, ten years down the road," he said.

"A ferry could be setup right away. There is a pier pre-existing that is already being used utilized for Camp Harborview. It proves that it is a legitimate means of transportation out there."

Ayers noted a 2002 reort commissioned by then Boston Mayor Thomas Menino found that water transportation, not vehicles, should be used to provide additional public access to Long Island. While Long Island was then accessible via a since demolished bridge, the report stated that the "landside roadway network in Quincy cannot support additional vehicular traffic." Establishing water transportation to the island would allow for increased public access, it said, "in a way that allows [Boston] to minimize impacts on Quincy residents while providing a way to effectively manage and control the public's presence on the island."

Ayers has filed several bills related to the proposed Long Island Bridge.

One of the bills would not allow construction of a new structure in or over the navigable or tide waters of two or more municipalities unless the affected municipalities could come to an agreement on the project beforehand.

"I filed this bill to establish greater communication and collaboration between not just Quincy and Boston, but every municipality that faces a similar issue throughout the commonwealth," Ayers said. "This bill protects surrounding neighborhoods, it preserves the environment, it ensures economic accountability to the taxpayers, and it fosters a more productive partnership between communities.

"The bill does not remove any of the current requirements that exist for a project like Long Island Bridge to be approved. It's an extra step in the process that ensures greater communication and cooperation between two cities or towns. It creates a requirement that. prior to the start of construction, both municipalities must enter into an 'intermunicipality agreement.' One of the aspects of this agreement is a determination on whether or not alternative options other than the building or rebuilding of a bridge exist. It also requires a cost-benefit analysis for all viable options, as well as a detailed study on the environmental impacts, both short-term and long-term.

"In relation to the Long Island Bridge issue specifically, it would ensure a closer and more thorough understanding of the entire scope of the project. It is also a proactive step to increase communication between the city of Quincy, and the new mayor of Boston once they are elected."

A separate bill he has filed would require the state to acquire Long Island and Moon Island from the city of Boston and to establish state parks on both; certain current uses on the islands would be allowed to continue. Ayers said he would like the public to be able to use Long Island for recreation.

"It is a beautiful recreational resource. I would obviously like to see a ferry service get reestablished there, something that it could be used to its full potential. Hiking. Fishing. Historical artifacts that are out there," Ayers said. "It is such a beautiful resource. It is unfortunate that we can't be taking advantage of that." Ayers has also proposed legislation to study the feasibility of using the former sewage treatment tanks on Moon Island for fish and shellfish farming.

"I am trying to come up with positive plans for some of the remnants out there," he said. "My plan, and I have a bill on this, was to make it a fish farm basically for shellfish and different types of fish. You've got the perfect type of infrastructure there. "I proposed the bill hoping it could be a way that the city of Quincy and the city of Boston could work together on something that would be positive. You could bring the schools in.

them are beat up." 2020 Olympic Games One To Remember For USA Team

By PATRICK FOLAN

The 2020 Olympic games were one to remember for the USA Olympic team. They were the overall medal winners with 113 in total and 39 Golds just edging China in the Gold count. There was success for USA Basketball for both men and women, USA beach volleyball for women, women's golf, men's and women's swimming, women's gymnastics, amongst many oth-

The backdrop of the Olympics were the empty stands which unfortunately occurred due to coronavirus restrictions. The athletes made the best of it, however, competing at a high level to achieve the medals. In addition to the 39 Gold, USA came home with 41 Silver and 33 Bronze medals.

The Olympic Games were a great event for the world to watch from their television screens. Unfortunately fans could not attend these games as a result of the aforementioned coronavirus restrictions. This Olympics was one for the ages with athletes coming from all over the world to participate in the games.

There was some disappointment for the USA contingent. The women's soccer team had gold ambitions but ultimately ended up with bronze. They started off the tournament with an uncharacteristic 3-0 loss to Sweden. They rebounded and made it to the semifinals where they lost to Canada 1-0. Megan Rapinoe noted after the game "I don't think I have ever lost to Canada."

Men's USA basketball also experienced a first game loss to France. The team, however, weathered the initial loss to go all the way to the gold medal game which was against France. The USA men's team avenged that opening round loss with a win and earning Gold. The final score was 87-82. France gave the USA a good game, but ultimately could not repeat their first round triumph.

USA women's basketball also earned Gold. They dominated the field and earned gold against an undersized yet determined Japanese team. The final score was 90-75. This Gold medal represented USA women's seventh in a row. The USA team has clearly dominated the field for quite some time. Winning at that rate is an impressive achievement for USA.

Gold medals were also awarded to the women's volleyball teams both beach and court. For beach it was Alex Klineman and April Ross who won 2-0 against Australia. As for court volleyball USA women won 3-0 against Brazil. Both versions of women's volleyball delivered impressive results.

Golf also had both men and women achieve Gold medals. Xander Schauffele won the individual gold medal for men's golf. He finished with a score of -18 to just to edge Silver place at -17. On the woman's team, Nelly Korda brought the Gold home with an individual score of -17 just edging a Silver score of -16. Winning in both men and woman shows USA's strength in the sport.

With respect to the lesser known sports, Jessica Springsteen, daughter of Bruce Springsteen, won silver in equestrian which is a great result. She won the Silver medal in the jumping competition. Jessica faced Sweden in the Gold medal jump off.

In keeping with lesser known sports, track cycling also had a USA Gold medal. Jennifer Valente had 124 points in the Gold medal competition with Silver scoring 108 points. This gave Jennifer Valente the Gold medal in the final women's track cycling competition.

Overall the Olympics was a successful one for the United States. Japan was a great host as well. USA continued its dominance in sports like volleyball and basketball. It experienced disappointment in USA women's soccer as they were expected to win Gold. Japan made a great stage for teamwork and overcoming adversity. Two values that defined the 2020 Olympic Games.

Renovations to Houghs Neck's LaBrecque Field, which will include the addition of a new walking path and the installation of a new playground closer to the site's parking lot, will be completed this fall.

The six-acre park is located near where Sea and Darrow streets converge. The field, named for Alfred LaBrecque, a World War I veteran from Houghs Neck who became president of the Quincy City Council, is presently home to a softball diamond, a pair of basketball courts and a playground.

The renovation project inside the park, which is being funded by the city's Preservation Community Committee, commenced in July. The work should be done by this fall, Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said recently.

"We should have it all pretty much done before the end of the fall," he said in an interview. "They are going to jump on it."

The playground at LaBrecque Field is currently located on Hawthorne Street. To provide better access, the new playground will be located near the parking lot on Sea Street, taking the place of one of the two basketball courts. The second basketball court on site will be rebuilt as part of the project.

"The playground will be constructed next to the parking lot, we'll call it the first basketball court. That will be put up and the old one will stay up while we are putting the new one up until the new one is up. That way the kids won't lose anything," McCarthy said. "Where the second court was, we're going to put a court back there - a brand

"It will be out front," he added. "You park your car right in the parking lot and step right into the park."

The basketball courts a LaBrecque are no longer used as much as they had been in the past, McCarthy

"It's sad to say that there is some activity at the basketball court, not much. It used to be one of the toughest basketball courts to get on to play a game," he said. "The football got condensed so there is not really any football practice down there. You've got soccer out in the field during soccer season and men's softball, really no baseball.

"It's quiet. Too bad. The kids don't go out like they

As part of the project, a perimeter walking path will be built along the edge of the park with exercise equipment in various locations, a new picnic area will be added, and the softball field will be leveled off.

"There is going to be a little like, similar to Pageant, a sitting area right there right down in that corner, a walking path around the perimeter," McCarthy

"We're going to level the field. The field has always been tough, even when I was a kid. It needs to be leveled - it needs to be done over. The backstop out back that has been there forever, it's just sitting there. It's all rusted. We're going to take that all down."

The playground presently at LaBrecque includes a number of memorials. Some of the memorials, like

OBITUARIES

Thomas E. Norton, Jr.

A funeral Mass for Thomas E. Norton Jr. of Hanover was celebrated Aug. 11 in St. Mary of the Sacred Heart, Hanover.

Mr. Norton died peacefully Aug. 5 surrounded by family.

He was born July 28, 1947 in Quincy to Thomas and Anne Norton. He is survived by his daughter Lyndsay Sullivan and her husband Kevin of Hanover. He was predeceased by his wife Gail Darnell. Mr. Norton is also survived by his sister Anne Ledwak and her husband Ken of Quincy. Son in law of Eleanor Darnell of Michigan. Beloved Papa of Maevis and Nora Sullivan. He is also survived by his nieces and nephews and many great friends.

Mr. Norton was a 1965 graduate of North Quincy High School and a proud graduate of Boston College Class of 1969. He then went on to graduate from Suffolk Law School. Through the years he worked at his own practice, Kirby, Trainor & Norton and then went to work at the District Attorney's Office and as the chief of the Criminal Bureau for the Attorney General's Office.

Mr. Norton was a big Boston sports fan; his favorite was the Boston College football team. He was a season ticket holder since 1969. He loved the annual trip to Martha's Vineyard with his family and loved attending any bowl game involving Boston College. Mr. Norton was a proud member of the Boston College Grid Iron Club.

They don't make them like Tom anymore, but for sure all of us were better because we knew him.

Interment at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to the Quincy Recreation Department Youth Sports Program, 100 Merrymount Pkwy., Quincy, MA 02169 or to Boston College, Office of University Advancement, Cadigan Alumni Center, 140 Commonwealth Ave, Chestnut Hill, MA 02467.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sullivan Funeral Homes, Hanover.

Michael J. Guerriero, 60

A funeral Mass for Michael Joseph Guerriero, 60, a lifelong resident of Quincy, will be celebrated Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at Divine Mercy Parish in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Guerriero died while surrounded by his family on Aug. 13 after fearlessly fighting an extremely admirable and courageous battle with cancer.

The beloved son to the late Francis L. and Josephine R. (Sheehan) Guerriero. The devoted husband of Darlene T. (Stagg) Guerriero for 37 years. The loving father of Krysta N. (Guerriero) Paul and her husband Matthew, Matthew M. Guerriero and Brittney A. Guerriero all of Quincy. The cherished grandfather of Alivia J. Paul. Brother of Richard F. Guerriero and his wife Patricia of Weymouth, Joseph M. Guerriero and his wife Mary of Braintree and Robert T. Guerriero and his wife Christine of Quincy. He is also survived by many in-laws, nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Mr. Guerriero was a member of the Association of Independent Football Officials (AIFO) and the South Shore Umpires Association (SSUA). He was an avid sports fan and enjoyed spending his free time coaching his children's sports teams, blowing the whistle as a referee and calling plays as an umpire on the field. His favorite location to officiate games would always be at home in front of his television where he could be as loud as he wanted.

Mr. Guerriero had a great love for music and attended many concerts with his wife and friends. He enjoyed traveling, had a passion for cooking, and always kept everyone laughing with his quick wit and sarcasm. He had a big personality and an even bigger heart. He always made a point to remain in close contact with his lifelong friends.

Above all else, Mr. Guerriero was most proud of being a husband, father, and grampy.

Visiting hours are 4 to 8 p.m. on Friday at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston.

Memorial donations may be made to the Jimmy Fund, 10 Brookline Place West, 6th Floor, Brookline, MA 02445-7226.

Dennis W. 'Chuck' Keefe, 76

A funeral Mass for Dennis W. "Chuck" Keefe, 76, of Rockland, was celebrated Wednesday in Holy Family Church, Rockland.

Mr. Keefe died Aug. 12. He was born and raised in Quincy to the late Thomas and Helen Keefe. Mr. Keefe was a United States Army veteran serving during the Vietnam era. For many years he worked as a maintenance mechanic at Children's Hospital in Bos-

Mr. Keefe was a member of the Weymouth Elks and the Rockland Knights of Columbus. He enjoyed golfing, fishing, deer hunting, and most spectator sports. He was, many years ago, a member of the Knights of Columbus old timers' softball team, the Spring Street Bombers. He also enjoyed trips to Maine and New Hampshire, and spending time with the family. He was a loving grandfather, and also enjoyed spending time with his many nieces and nephews.

Mr. Keefe was known for his sense of humor, easygoing nature and generosity. Many years ago he moonlighted as a DJ, mostly for friends and relatives. He was quick to get on the dance floor and enjoyed partying with friends.

Beloved husband of 52 years to Elaine (Alcarez) Keefe of Rockland. Loving father of Karen Keefe of Rockland and the late Kristen Keefe. Grandfather of Seth and Shane Rosczewski of Rockland. Brother of Thomas Keefe of Hanson, Shirley Quirk of Marstons Mills, Jean Beaudry of Pembroke, and the late Helen Coveney, Daniel Keefe, and Donald Keefe.

Interment at Holy Family Cemetery, Rockland.

Memorial donations may be made to the charity of your choice.

Funeral arrangements were made by McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Anna Lorraine Johnson, 77

Funeral services for Anna Lorraine Johnson, ton. age 77, a lifelong Quincy resident, were held Monday in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Ms. Johnson died peacefully Aug. 11 at South Shore zles. Hospital.

She was born in Boston, to the late John A. and Marion E. (Harrison) Johnson. Raised in Quincy, Ms. Johnson was a graduate of from the former Hickox

Secretarial School in Bos-

Beloved wife of William F. Schlager. Dear step-mother of Jeffrey A. Schlager of Georgia, Thomas M. Schlager, and Heidi A. Murphy, both of Brock-Quincy High School, Class ton. Loving grandmother of 1962, and later graduated of eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, and sister of John A. Johnson, Jr. of Florida and Maureen Wheaton of Braintree. She is also survived by her niece, Janet Johnson of Brockton, as well as many other nieces and nephews.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the charity of your choice.

Francis A. Puccia, 72 Francis A. Puccia, 72, of

Born in West Newton, Mr. Puccia was a lifetime resident of Quincy. He was the beloved son of the late Anthony Puccia and Rose (Cappello) Puccia, the beloved husband of the late Carol (Arenti) Puccia and the loving father of the late Christopher Puccia. He is also survived by his brother Salvatore Puccia, sister Nancy (Puccia) Jackson many nephews, nieces, great nieces and great nephews.

Quincy died April 21, 2020.

Mr. Puccia was a graduate of North Quincy High. He worked for many years at Home Depot in Quincy and he was also on the Board of Directors for Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts.

His favorite thing was

Mr. Puccia had a very special and wonderful life with Carol and Chris, they were his life. He was a gentle soul and loved people, he would take walks around Houghs Neck and would often stop to talk with his friends and neighbors. Everyone that knew him loved him. He will be truly missed by all of us.

A celebration of life will be held at Boston Cremation, 116 Franklin St., Quincy, on Aug. 30 from 9 to 11 a.m. with a luncheon to follow at The Common Market Restaurant, Quincy. Family and friends are all welcomed.

Dillon J. Beazley, 28

Visiting hours for Dillon J. Beazley, age 28, were 4 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday at Clancy-Lucid Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Mr. Beazley died Aug. 12. He was currently a Weymouth resident but most proud to be from Quincy. Mr. Beazley was the proud loving father of Cameron Muldoon sharing the loving parental bond with Alyssa Muldoon of Weymouth. He truly shined when in the presence of his son with his big smile and contagious laugh. Beloved son of Wendy (Beazley) and Anthony Brancaccio of Weymouth. Loving brother of Anthony and Dominic Brancaccio of Weymouth and the late Christopher MacIver. "The Favorite" grandson of Catherine Lamson of Weymouth, and William Beazley and his wife Marlena of Dorchester.

Adored nephew of the late Michael Beazley, William Beazley and his wife Sabrina of Whitman, Jennifer Llama and her husband Matt of Florida, Jillian Sweeney and her husband Patrick of Whitman, Jeffery Beazley and his wife Christina of New York, Kevin Beazley of Dorchester, and Michelle Beazley of Dorchester and so many more hand selected aunts and uncles. Survived by cousins sharing a close bond with Devon and Macayla Sweeney, Kara Foster, Samantha and William Beazley and many more.

Mr. Beazley was a devoted friend making all feel like family; he was truly the life of the party bringing inappropriate humor in any moment. He could always make you laugh even on your worst of days. Mr. Beazley was an incredible chef using all of our homes to make the most interesting but delicious concoctions. You could smell Mr. Beazley coming a mile away to be greeted with that big cheesy smile, a big bear hug followed by "where's the food, give me the aux chord and do you have a puffer."

That's who Mr. Beazley was, a man who wanted to break bread with you, to check in on you while sharing HIS music with all, to be moved the way he was even when he couldn't breathe. This is how we believe Mr. Beazley would want us to remember him; being that funny guy, who loved being a dad to Cameron, who wanted to make sure we were all okay while letting us know he got "the best deal" and to remember "life is short, wear your Jordans."

Memorial donations may be made to a GoFund-Me page at gofund.me/ a9df485d. Any donations received will be used to offset funeral cost and remaining donations will be contributed to Cameron's trust fund.

Paul G. Kennedy, 92

A funeral Mass for Paul G. Kennedy, 92, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Aug. 13 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Kennedy died peacefully Aug. 7 at Mount Carmel Care Center in Lenox while receiving hospice care and surrounded by his family.

He was born in Boston and the son of the late John Kennedy and Sarah (Glancey) Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy grew up in North Quincy and graduated from North Quincy High School Class of 1946. While in high school, Mr. Kennedy played football, enjoyed sailing at the Squantum Yacht Club and during the winter he enjoyed skiing with his brothers and friends at the Old Colony Ski Club in Franconia, NH.

In his late teens, he entered into the United States Army and served his country for 2 years during the Korean War while stationed in Georgia. After his military service Mr. Kennedy went to work for his family business, and then he started The All-White Potato Company with his brother Ivan. All-White Potato Company was located on Penn Street in Quincy and then relocated to the New Market Square/Meat Distributors area of Boston until he sold the business and retired in 1993. All-White was the family business that Mr. Kennedy put his heart and soul into, and he employed many friends and family for many years. One of Mr. Kennedy's long-time and most loyal customers was the Morey Pearl Seafood Restaurant in Quincy, a landmark for many years on the South Shore. Mr. Kennedy's son Paul Jr. and his friends affectionately referred to Paul Sr. as "The Big Potato."

Mr. Kennedy had a very strong work ethic which he passed on to his three children and his grandchildren. He also had a strong entrepreneurial spirit and love of showmanship. He owned several businesses along with The All-White Potato Company, including The New England Ski Show that he started in the mid '60s and sold in 1970. Mr. Kennedy brought in world renowned skiers like Stein Eriksen to headline the event, and many Northeast, Canadian, and several European ski resorts and ski equipment companies each fall at the Hynes Auditorium to advance the awareness and build excitement around the ski industry in those early days. Mr. Kennedy hired the legendary Warren Miller to make a ski promotion film of a "ski hot dogger" doing cliff jumps at Tuckerman's Ravine in NH, that was shown to The Ski Show attendees at the Hynes.

Mr. Kennedy also loved to tell the story when he came up with the idea to build an industrial strength ski jump with white plastic bristles for artificial snow, employing the help of an industrial bristle manufacturer in NH. The ski jump was set up just inside the entrance of the Hynes Auditorium and professional "hot dog" skiers (early day extreme skiers) would jump over the crowd at The Ski Show. The hot doggers would schuss down the white bristle ski jump launch, jump over the crowd as they were walking into the Hynes, and safely land on the matching white bristle landing pad. What could go wrong? That was Mr. Kennedy, always looking for excitement and entrepreneurial opportunities to have fun while making money and connecting people.

In the early 1980s Mr. Kennedy jumped on the technology wave and started the Boston franchise of Action Telex, a competitor of Western Union. Action Telex Boston was based out of an extra office at All-White Potato Company in Boston, offering local companies the service to send Telex correspondence messages to points all over the world for a fee. Always one to strive to preserve the value of an investment, Mr. Kennedy was fortunate to quickly sell his Action Telex franchise when he saw the advent of the fax machine at a local Boston food industry conference.

Mr. Kennedy continued his love for sailing and skiing throughout his life. He proudly talked about winning the First Place Trophy with the "Silver Fox Sailing Crew" with his cousin Don MacGilvray and his crew during the 1995 New England Sailing Championship.

Mr. Kennedy was very proud of his Irish heritage, he could have a tough exterior at times, and he had a kind heart. He was also very proud of and loved his family. They were the foundation of all that was important to him. They will remember all the fun memories they created over the years.

Mr. Kennedy was the beloved husband of 58 years to the late Rose I. (Volpe) Kennedy. He was the devoted father of Paul Kennedy, Jr. and his wife Maria, Melissa Kennedy and her husband Joe Maleady, and the late Kristen Kennedy and her life partner Tracee Whitley who survives. He was the loving grandfather of Vincent and Ian Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy is pre-deceased by his two brothers and two sisters Ivan, David, Joan and Anne. He is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to the Kristen C. Kennedy Memorial Fund, funding college bound art students at Braintree High School, 449 East High St., Suite 112, Lexington, KY 40507 or see bgcf.org.

Donations may also be made to the Pan Mass Challenge c/o Dana Farber Cancer Research, 450 Brookline Ave Boston, MA 02215 or visit pmc.org/pk0093.

Rosemarie Ann Bradley, 78

A Mass of Christian Burial for Rosemarie Ann Bradley, 78, of Quincy, was celebrated Aug. 7 at Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy. Mrs. Bradley died peacefully Aug. 1, surrounded by the love, comfort and care of her family.

Born and raised in Dorchester, she was the only daughter of the late Natale P. and Sarafina M. (Del Selva) Muscato, where she was a communicant of St. Mark's Parish, and graduated St. Gregory High School.

Mrs. Bradley relished her time as a homemaker while her daughters were in school, working hard to instill a solid foundation of Christian values for her young family and ensuring her loving husband, Henry, was supported as he was forging his career in public service. It wasn't until the children were older that she took a job as a sales clerk with Kartens Jewelers. After 10 years, she accepted a position as a purchasing clerk for the City of Quincy, working for many years before finally retiring in 2005 to travel, plan trips to Las Vegas, Disneyland and Disney World, Hawaii, Foxwoods, Plainridge and Mohegan Sun.

An active member of Sacred Heart Church of the Divine Mercy Parish in Quincy, Mrs. Bradley was a tireless volunteer and fundraiser for many church causes along with her husband, Henry. She was a talented craftsman and designed many ribbons, bows and bridal veils to give away to friends and family over the years. She served as Past President of Milton Ladies Auxillary Unit 114, and was a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post of the American Legion Ladies Auxiliary, Unit

She was the loving and devoted Bride of Henry P. "Hank" Bradley, with whom she was preparing to celebrate the 60th anniversary of their nuptials this month. Cherished mother of Helena R. Hood and her husband Peter J. of Hull and Annette M. Bradley of Quincy. Devoted grandmother of John "Jack" Hood. Dear sister of the late Frank P. Muscato, and sister in law of Maureen Muscato of Carver, Joan Abban of Quincy, and Helen "Micki" LeMoine of FL, as well as many nieces, nephews, extended family and dear friends.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD - Maggie Smith wasn't sure she wanted to play the dowager countess, yet again, in "Downton Abbey 2," but by the time she read the script, which has been called "a lot of fun," she agreed to visit Downton at least one more time. Filming began in April, and by July 16 Elizabeth McGovern had completed filming her role. In addition to the original colorful characters returning, they've added Dominic West (upcoming in "The Crown" as Prince Charles, 2022-23), Laura Haddock (last in "Transformers: The Last Knight"), Hugh Dancy (last in "The Good Fight") and Natalie Baye (last in the French film "Garcon Chiffon"). But the Christmas opening has been scuttled in favor of March 18, 2022.

Hugh Bonneville completed work on "Downton" in time to prepare for his Netflix film "I Came By," with "1917" star George MacKay. MacKay also toplines the BBC series "The Trick" and Netflix's "Munich," with Jeremy Irons. Not bad for a kid who played Peter Pan 18 years ago. Bonneville still has a date with "Paddington 3" (the first two films earned a combined $500 million). Ironically, Bonneville was born in Paddington, London.

Here's another irony: After a disappointing appearance in Netflix's "The Prom," Meryl Streep is currently filming "Disappointment Blvd.," starring Oscar-winner Joaquin Phoenix, Patti LuPone, Nathan Lane and Parker Posey. All we know is that it's supposed to be an intimate. decades-spanning portrait of one of the most successful entrepreneurs of all time (who could that be? Florenz Ziegfeld, P.T. Barnum, Billy Rose?). Shooting began June 28 in Montreal and is expected to end in October. Meryl has "Let Them All Talk," with Candice Bergen, Lucas Hedges and Dianne Wiest, directed by Steven Soderbergh, available on HBO Max, and Netflix's "Don't Look Up," with Jennifer Lawrence, Cate Blanchett and Leonardo Di-Caprio.

When NBC canceled "Manifest" after three seasons, they left us hanging with a lot of questions. Those who've invested a lot of time in this complicated series feel cheated. When Netflix began running seasons one and two, they found a large viewership and put in a bid to Warners TV to pick up the series for the fourth season. Here's where the fun begins...after seeing the numbers on Netflix, NBC thought it acted too quickly in canceling the show and are again in talks with Warners for a fourth season. Either way, it'll be a mess, since all the actors were released from their contracts. However, the cast has participated in a #SaveManifest campaign and have expressed a willingness to come back. NBC didn't care that they left us hanging, just that Netflix was getting big ratings. Someone's gonna be manifested with a middle finger!

Figural Bottle — "Figural bottles" are just what you would imagine - bottles shaped like living creatures or familiar objects. The earliest American clear glass figurals were made in the 1860s. In 1866, Dr. Fisch packaged his bitters medicine in, what else, a fish-shaped bottle. Brown's Celebrated Indian Herb Bitters was sold in a bottle shaped like a standing Indian woman, from about 1868 to 1875. Dr. Bell's Tonic was sold in a dark amber figural bellshaped bottle in about 1875.

Probably the best-known antique figural was used by E.G. Booz from about 1858 to 1870. It is an amber log cabin with the name Booz embossed on the top. Since 1931 several reproductions have been made. Booz sold whiskey in the bottles; many taverns had them on their shelves, and customers asked for "Booz," the word still used in bars for whiskey. Generic figurals were popular bottles in the late 1800s and early 1900s. Probably the best known are violin, pig or fish bottles, all still being made. Some vintage glass bottles that copy a trademark, such as a Butterworth syrup bottle shaped like Mrs. Butterworth or the man representing Poland shelf. Figurals helped make Avon originally called the California Perfume Company in 1886, changing its name in 1929 - to become a successful cosmetics company with fancy packaging and home sales. There was a collecting frenzy from the 1960s to 1980s for the empty, no-longer-made figural bottles. Unfortunately, empty bottles were stolen from the bottle factory and sold to collectors as rare, increasing the supply and lowering both prices and col-

But many other companies had unusual old figurals that still sell for high prices. This very rare 7-inch bottle shaped like a Prussian military helmet was made about 1890 of dark amber glass with a wooden spike and a partial German label. It sold in an online auction by Glass Works Auctions of East Greenville, Pennsylvania, for $780

Q: I just bought a solid wood gun display case with working locks and skeleton key. Inside the bottom drawer is a metal tag that says "JB Van Sciver Co." The craftmanship is beautiful. What is the value of this piece?

A: Joseph Bishop Van Sciver founded J.B. Van Sciver Furniture Co. in Camden, New Jersey, in 1881. The company made furniture, clocks, lamps, rugs and draperies. At its peak, it had stores in several cities. The company went bankrupt in 1983, and production stopped. The remaining stock was sold at a warehouse outlet in 1984. If you just bought your display case, it's worth what you paid for it.

- The opposite of paranoia is pronoia. A person suffering from pronoia feels that people or entities around them are plotting to do them good!
- American flags left on the moon will eventually get bleached white by the sun.
- Only two animals have the ability to see behind themselves without turning around: the rabbit and the parrot. Their eyes are on the sides of their head, allowing them to swivel 360 degrees.
- Not that we ever gave any real thought to the matter, but "snow-bones" are the lines of snow or ice left at the sides of roads after the rest of the snow has melted.
- David Babcock broke a Guinness World Record for his time in the Kansas City marathon, at 5 hours, 48 minutes and 27 seconds. But not for running he managed to complete the race while knitting a scarf that measured just over 12 feet long. As he said later, "Knitting the whole way really did help distract me from the hard parts of the marathon."

Now here's a tip!

• Rubbing alcohol can be used to remove ballpoint-pen ink from most upholstery.

• "Polish wall tiles in the bathroom using car wax. They will repel water really well. Just be sure that you cover the floor before you apply any wax. You do not want to polish your tub, as that is a safety hazard for sure!" – M.W. in Missouri

• If you have wood floors, you might already know about felt furniture pads — the little self-stick felt circles you put on furniture legs to reduce scratches on your floors. You might not know that these same pads can reduce scuff marks that appliances make on countertops. It also makes it easier to scoot around a heavy mixer or other appliances.

• "Check your mower to see if you're cutting your lawn to the optimum height. Generally, cutting grass to 2 1/2 inches will allow it to retain more moisture, requiring less watering, and help shade out weeds, too." – O.F. in Alabama

• Here's a workout tip: Rotate among a few pairs of running shoes to get the best life out of them. Rotating gives them a chance to dry out between wearings, and runners who practice this routine have a 39% lower chance of injury, according to a Luxembourg research firm.

Q: How old is Clint Eastwood now? Is he still directing or acting? Also, is he still married to that former newscaster? - K.K.

A: Movie star turned filmmaker Clint Eastwood has no plans to quit show business despite being 91 years old. In fact, he has a new movie due out soon, "Cry Macho," in which he plays a former rodeo star who goes on a journey driving his boss' son (Eduardo Minett) across Mexico and finds redemption through teaching the boy what is means to be "a good man." Eastwood earned another double-hyphenated title for this project as director-actor. It's Eastwood's first acting role since 2018's "The Mule," having directed "Richard Jewell" after that, which was about the man who was wrongly accused of being the 1996 Atlanta Olympics bomber.

In an interview with People magazine, Eastwood said "Cry Macho" was 40 years in the making. He was asked decades ago to star in the film, but felt he was too young for the part. Years later he thought about directing the movie, but it "went by the wayside" until about a year ago, and now it "feels like I'm just at the right age and I thought it'd be fun to do."

As for his personal life, Eastwood and Dina Ruiz divorced in 2014. They had met in the early '90s when she interviewed him for a local Monterey, California, news station. On retirement, Eastwood says he's taking it "one picture at a time, but it was the right time for this one."

Q: I recently rewatched the Kevin Costner movie "Field of Dreams" on TV. I hadn't seen it since it was in theaters decades ago. Whatever happened to the actor who played his father in the film? -GL.

A: "Field of Dreams" was based on a novel by W.P. Kinsella called "Shoeless Joe," and it's recently had a resurgence in popularity because of its 30year anniversary.

In the film, Costner plays an Iowa farmer named Ray Kinsella, who builds a regulationsize baseball field on his property abutting the cornfields. His initially wacky idea was preceded by visits from ghosts of the 1919 scandal-plagued Chicago White Sox team, including Shoeless Joe Jackson, as played by Ray Liotta.

After casting hundreds of other actors in the small but impactful role of Costner's dad, an unknown named Dwier Brown was picked for the unforgettable role, but his career never soared like Costner and Liotta's did after the movie. Most recently, he's guest starred in primetime dramas like "Rizzoli & Isles," "CSI" and "House," but just never really had any big long-term parts. Brown gave a heartfelt interview in a recent documentary special about the film on FOX TV, and he previously published his memoir, "If You Build It ... A Book About Fathers, Fate, and Field of Dreams."

Q: When is the next season of "Dancing with the Stars?" I keep thinking I'll get tired of it, but I love the gowns and choreography! - K.K.

A: "Dancing with the Stars" is about to embark on its 30th season (over a 15-year period) after suffering a small dip in the ratings during its last installment. Despite a mixed reviews, Tyra Banks will return to host when it premieres Sept. 20 at 8 p.m. ET on ABC. As for the upcoming competitors, they should be announced in early September, but be sure to keep checking ABC.com/shows/ dancing-with-the-stars for all the latest news.

Dog's Begging Spirals Out of Control

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: Our dog "Boadicea" is a sweetheart, but when she wants a treat she turns into a little monster. She drools on my arm, chews on my roommate's shoe (with his foot in it), barks loudly, yips...whatever it takes. We eventually break down and give her a treat. This happens several times a day. How can we stop this behavior? - Darren in Manchester, New Hampshire DEAR DARREN: There are two steps I'd recommend to curb this behavior, because you know the downside of Boadicea's begging: spiraling behavioral problems, future digestive issues and potential

First, reinforce her basic obedience training. Work with her at least once a day on the "sit," "stay," "lie down," "leave it" and "come here" commands. I recommend not working with her during the time that you're normally relaxing in the living room with your roommate, because you want to try to reinforce that certain places and times are for training, play or treats.

Obedience training alone won't resolve the problem, though, because she's developed a habit of begging whenever you're trying to relax or socialize. So, you'll need to employ the "ignore and divert" strategy as well. Ignore her attention-seeking behavior for a specific amount of time...say, five minutes. Next, command her to either sit or lie down, and give her a chew toy. When she inevitably gets up to beg again, repeat the process. Don't give her a treat at all. This will take time, but eventually she will get it.

Many dog owners add a structured treat time to the day. For example, after your dinner and dishes are done, she can have her treat. This will help reinforce when and where she gets treats, and how she is supposed to behave.

In Case You Missed It

Walk of Shame (R) - To anyone who's had a hot night out end up horribly wrong, this 2014 comedy is for you. Elizabeth Banks plays Meghan, a Los Angeles TV news anchor who finds herself in all the wrong neighborhoods in the wee hours of the morning after some hard partying. Alone, and with no phone or car, she has only her wits to get herself back across town to the news station in time for the evening broadcast ... and the promise of a promotion. A hilarious series of close calls and the help of some unsavory characters lead to a ridiculously funny conclusion. (Netflix)

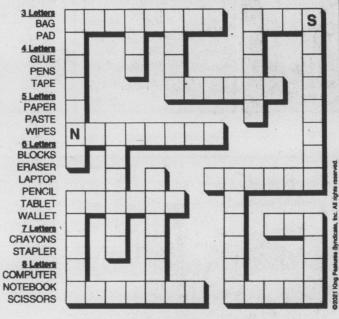

Scene from "100 Foot Wave"

The Skeleton Twins (R) -- Extramarital affairs, suicide attempts, sibling estrangement — this film has it all! Four actors typically known for their comedic work take on some seriously heavy topics, resulting in this 2014 Sundance Film Festival winner. Kristen Wiig, Bill Hader, Ty Burrell and Luke Wilson each play characters with intertwining personal issues to sort through. There's a lot of blame tossed among them, but the lighthearted moments are "really" funny, as you would hope from these comedians. Wiig and Hader have amazing chemistry playing sister and brother, both with an incredible talent for laughing through life's pain. (Amazon Prime Video)

Non-Stop Acid Reflux? Look At Surgical Options

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 78-year-old female who has suffered from acid reflux for many years and has been taking Prilosec (omeprazole) for at least 15 years. I have heard that it is not meant for longtime use. If I don't take it, I have such heartburn I can't sleep and am in misery all day and night. I recently attended a seminar on the new LINX surgery and hope to have it done. Do you have any information on the success of or problems after this surgery?--J.B.

ANSWER: The LINX device is a magnetic ring, placed by laparoscopic surgery, that helps increase the strength of the lower good idea. esophageal sphincter, the valvelike muscular structure at the junction of the esophagus and the stomach. This reduces reflux (backward movement) of stomach acid up into the esophagus. The procedure was very effective at reducing both heartburn symptoms (89% before procedure to 12% after) and the need for daily medicines like omeprazole (100% before to 15% after).

The device has not been in use for a very long time, so longterm safety data is unavailable. Some people had to have the devices removed because they eroded into the esophagus, but only 0.3% of devices were removed at four years.

There are other types of surgeries used to treat reflux, most of which are effective at reducing both symptoms and the need for medication. There are now options for treatment being done endoscopically (with an instrument placed through the mouth), without the need even for laparoscopic surgery (with the instrument being placed by small incisions through the skin).

My personal practice is to discuss medication treatments as well as surgical treatments for people with moderate to severe acid reflux. Surgery in younger people may have more benefit by preventing a lifetime of daily medication. People who do not get relief with medication are those who most clearly benefit from these kinds of procedures.

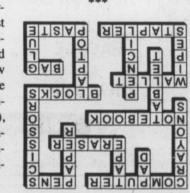

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 90-year-old man. My wife's life was saved in 1952 with Red Cross blood. Since then, I have donated more than 31 gallons of blood. My blood is CMV-negative. They want me to donate more.

I had a CT scan after a fall, and a 1-cm ground-glass nodule was found in my lung. They are going to do another scan in six months to see if it is growing. The Red Cross said if I had cancer I should refrain from donating. What should I do?-- J.J. B.

ANSWER: Based on the information you are giving me, it's about 90% likely that this will not be cancer. A repeat scan to see if it is growing is a

Even in the unlikely event this is cancer, the likelihood of passing cancer cells along in a blood transfusion is very, very small However blood banks like the Red Cross are exceedingly careful to maintain a safe blood supply, and waiting six months to donate is safest.

Let me add my thanks to your selfless giving of a precious, life-saving resource -- your blood -- which is especially valuable to people with immune system disease given the lack of the common pathogen cytomegalovirus, which can cause serious disease in people after cancer chemo-

Cute Zucchini Meatloaf Muffins

Even if the men in your family aren't wild about zucchini, they'll go wild over these cute muffin meatloaves.

- ounces extra-lean ground turkey or beef
- cup plus I tablespoon dried fine breadcrumbs
- cup finely chopped onion cup shredded unpeeled zuc
 - teaspoons Italian seasoning cup (one 8-ounce can) tomato sauce
 - Sugar substitute suitable for baking to equal 1 tablespoon
- cup shredded reduced-fat mozzarella cheese

1. Preheat oven to 375 F. Spray a six-well muffin pan with olive oil-flavored cooking spray.

2. In a large bowl, combine meat, breadcrumbs, onion, zucchini, 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning and 1/2 cup tomato sauce. Mix well to combine. Evenly divide meat mixture between prepared muffin cups and make indentation in the center of each.

3. In a small bowl, combine remaining 1/2 cup tomato sauce, sugar substitute and remaining 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning. Stir in mozzarella cheese. Evenly spoon about 1 tablespoon sauce mixture over top of each "muffin."

4. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes. Place muffin pan on wire rack and let set for 5 minutes. Remove "muffins" from pan and serve at once. Freezes well. Serves 6.

Assume you've arrived at three notrump on the bidding shown, and West leads the jack of spades. East contributes the nine on the first trick, and you take the king. How would you continue?

At first glance, it seems you are faced with an impossible assignment. You have only eight tricks in view, and the queen of clubs is your doesn't appear to be any way to score a trick with the queen without conceding a trick to the king first, and if you do, East will run enough spades to set the contract.

But when the deal occurred, South made three notrump, and, what's nents could do about it.

Declarer began by cashing four diamonds, East discarding a club and a heart. Next came the A-K of hearts. East followed to the first heart, but had to discard a spade on the second one in order to protect his king of clubs.

By this time, South had taken seven tricks and the defense none. It was clear from East's discard of a spade that he had relinquished a spade winner in order to guard the club king. East's remaining six cards therefore had to be the A-Q-x-x of spades and doubleton king of clubs.

Accordingly, declarer next led the ten of spades from dummy. East collected four spade tricks, but had to lead a club at the end, allowing South to score the queen and ace and so make his contract.

Note that East could not have escaped the impending endplay by taking the ace of spades at trick one and returning a spade to declarer's king. In that case, South would have proceeded as before, eventually throwing East into the lead with dummy's last spade to achieve the same result.

demic, through this fall's election cycle. Like last year, residents will have to request a mail-in ballot before receiving one. The last day to request a mail-in ballot for the preliminary is Wednesday, Sept. 8 and the deadline to do so for the final election is Wednesday, Oct. 27.

The deadline for residents to register to vote in the preliminary election is Wednesday, Aug. 25 at 8 p.m. The deadline to do so ahead of the final election is Wednesday, Oct. 13, at 8 p.m. The deadline to request an absentee ballot is noon on the Monday prior to each election date.

In a separate vote on Monday, councillors also approved the list of polling places that will be used on Sept. 14 and Nov. 2. Those polling places are unchanged from last November's presidential election.

This is the final election cycle featuring ward and precinct lines drawn following the 2010 federal census. A new map will be in place starting next year, based on the 2020 census, which found Quincy's population had increased by more than 10 percent to 101,636 over the past decade.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo said additional polling precincts may be used starting next year.

It is too soon to say when the new maps could be released, the city clerk added.

"We just got the numbers late last week," she said.

The Sept. 14 election features a seven-person preliminary contest for the School Committee. The candidates running in the preliminary, by order of appearance on the ballot, are:

Emily Lebo, 354 Highland Ave; Ellen Patterson O'Donnell, 6 Hatherly Rd.; Courtney Perdios, 86 Ruggles St.; Liz Speakman,

129 Merrymount Rd.; Doug Gutro, 85 Arnold St.; Liberty Schaaf, 28 Howe St.; and Tina Cahill, 51 Grenwold

Lebo and Gutro are incumbents and will have the wording "candidate for re-nomination" after their names on the ballot. Perdios, who was appointed to the committee in Febru-Crispo said her office ary to fill a vacant seat, will have the wording "current school committee member" next to her name. The remaining candidates will only have their addresses next to their names.

> The order of candidates was drawn at random by the city clerk's office earlier this month. For the final election, incumbents would be listed first followed by remaining candidates in alphabetical order.

The top six vote getters in the Sept. 14 will advance to the final election on Nov. 2. The top three finishers on Nov. 2 will be elected to four-year terms on the committee.

The Nov. 2 election will also feature races for two-year terms on the City Council. There will be contested races in Wards 1, 2, and 5 as well as a fourperson race for the council's three at-large seats.

Tips For Drying Flowers

By MELINDA MYERS

Enjoy and share the beauty of your flower garden all year long. Pick and dry a few flowers to use in flower arrangements, craft projects or as gifts for friends and family.

Pick the flowers when they are at peak bloom and blossoms are dry. Cut flowers for drying mid-day when they contain less moisture to reduce the dry time.

Use a bypass pruner or garden scissors to cut the stems above a set of healthy leaves. Remove the foliage and gather them into small bundles. Secure the stems with rubber bands that contract as the stems shrink and continue holding them tight. Use a spring-loaded clothespin to hang the bundles from a hanger, clothes line or nail. Allow the flowers to dry in a warm, dark, dust-free loca-

Flat-faced flowers like daisies tend to close a bit when dried upside down. Try laying them face down on a flat surface. Simply cut off the stem and place the flowers face down on newspaper in a warm, dry location. Once dried, you can glue them in place or use florist wire to create stems for arranging.

And don't forget to pick a few seedpods from perennials and ornamental grasses. These have dried, for the most part, on the plants and make great additions to your dried flower arrangements and projects.

Consider taking a trip to your local florist or craft store for more ideas and materials for drying delicate flowers. Silica sand works well for delicate blossoms like iris as well as roses, mums and more. Simply fill the bottom inch of a container with silica sand. Remove all but an inch of the flower stem. Place the flower, stem side up or on its side, on the surface of the silica sand. Gently pour silica sand over the flowers until completely covered. Follow label directions. Most flowers dried this way maintain their beauty when dried in silica sand. Just use a small paint brush to gently remove any remaining sand.

Test flowers for dryness before putting them in an arrangement or storing for future use. Carefully rub a piece of the flower between your fingers. If it feels dry, it is ready to use. If it still feels moist, continue letting them dry.

Store extra dried flowers in a location with low humidity and away from direct sunlight. Consider loosely wrapping with newspaper or kraft paper to prevent crushing and place in a box until needed.

Whichever drying method you choose, the result is the same - year-round enjoyment of your garden's

Ayers Optimistic About Sports Betting

By SCOTT JACKSON

Rep. Bruce Ayers is optimistic lawmakers on Beacon Hill will be able to come to an agreement to legalize sports betting in Massachusetts.

Ayers, a Quincy Democrat, was among the 156 members of the House of states and if we can regulate Representatives who voted in favor of legislation to legalize sports betting last month. All three of his colleagues who also represent parts of Quincy - Speaker Ronald Mariano, Rep. Tackey Chan and Rep. Daniel Hunt, all Democrats - voted in favor of the bill as well.

The bill approved by the House would allow adults 21 and older to bet on college and professional sports at casinos and racetracks and online. Betting on high school and youth sports would be prohibited, along with betting on the performance of individual college athletes and on injuries, penalties and discipline.

During a recent interview, Ayers said he supported the measure because it would represent a new revenue stream for the state.

"What we are looking at with sports betting revenuewise is probably close to $40, $50 million a year in income and this income, as we all know, was going outside to other states and offshore," he stated.

"We are losing some of that revenue to surrounding it and capitalize on the revenue, we ought to be taking advantage of that."

In addition to the new revenue from sports betting, Ayers noted the state would also receive funds from licensing fees.

"That will be a huge boost," he said.

With the House approving its own legislation to legalize sports betting, the ball is now in the Senate's court to do the same.

"The Senate hasn't taken it out yet and there are things they are trying to iron out. I think one of them is the college [sports] - they are trying to figure out what they are going to do with that," Ayers said, adding that he expects the Senate would take up the matter this fall. If the Senate were to approve a bill that did not allow betting on college sports, and that prohibition on college sports betting made it out of conference committee, Ayers said he would still vote in favor of legalizing betting on professional sports with the understanding that lawmakers could take a second look at college sports in the future.

"I would, again, because it all goes back to the revenue. It is something that could always be addressed," he responded when asked if he would vote for a bill that did not allow betting on college sports.

"Like a lot of bills, sometimes it is not ideal when it passes depending on the interests on the left and right side, but you can always work in collaboration to address those. I'm pretty confident the House and Senate, I am hopeful, that they will come up with a compro-

Ayers said it has yet to be determined where the revenue from sports betting would go. That will likely be addressed in conference committee, he said

"That is to be kind of still determined. Once the House and the Senate hash out their versions, I'm sure something like that would be in there," Ayers said.

"Things like that are going to be coming out soon, especially to get a consensus, I think, with the House and the Senate and the governor. It is a great revenue source that we should be taking advantage of."

Ayers' counterpart in the Senate, Sen. John Keenan, previously told The Sun he would vote in favor of legislation to legalize betting on college and professional sports provided it is properly regulated.

"If we have sports betting that is going to go to other surrounding states or go offshore and we know it is going to occur then we should allow it, regulate it and get the revenue from it," Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, said in July.

Keenan was likewise optimistic that both chambers would be able to pass legislation to authorize sports betting.

"I think the chances are pretty good," he said. "What format it will take and when it is done, I can't say."

More than two dozen states have legalized sports betting since 2018, when the Supreme Court struck down a law that prohibited sports betting in all but a handful of states. Massachusetts residents do not have to travel far if they wish to place their bets legally, as Connecticut, New Hampshire, New York and Rhode Island are among the states to have legalized sports betting in the past three years.

Each of the states to authorize sports betting to date allows gambling on both college and professional athletics. Several states - including Connecticut, New Hampshire, New York and Rhode Island – do not allow betting on in-state schools.
